ment for us to meet you? An early reply will be appreciated.

"Yours in Christian love,
"B. J. Cady."

Mr. Lee replied to this letter as follows:

August 4, 1919.
"Mr. B. J. Cady,
Newberg, Oregon.

"Dear Sir—In reply to your kind letter of the 3rd, this occurs to me—You desire to debate with the ministers and Church of the Master which you have already rejected. Such a proposal, I do not wish to say, indicates any lack of sincerity on your part, but at any rate, it is a surprising and strange proposal."

"We have already witnessed to you in the Master's name, quite fully, as to the danger and untruth of the distinctive teachings of the sect that you represent. Study carefully the brief articles in last week's Graphic. Study also Mr. Canright's book prayerfully. And you will doubtless be led, if you really have the teachable mind of a disciple of Christ, to see that your doctrine of Judaism, and legalism, are un- bondage, and not unto the liberty that is in Christ Jesus.

"It is an awful thing to lead souls away from the free and abounding grace that is in our Savior, to the diluted forms of universalism and separatism and legalism that appear in the distinctive teachings of your church or society. And it is therefore with utmost alarm and tender Gospel love that the ministers of the Word here in Newberg, for whom I am permitted to speak in this capacity, plead with you of the peril of being a false teacher, and bringing upon yourself greater condemnation. See Jas. 3:1.

"Praying that even yet, you may be persuaded to heed our loving words of grace and truth, we are, dear sir,

"Your true friends in the Lord,
"Newberg Ministerial Association."
George H. Lee, Secretary."

It seems to me that if the Newberg Ministerial Association is composed of men who really are "ministers of the Word," and if the Bible upholds them in the statements they have made against us, they should gladly have appointed a meeting with Evangelist Bell and myself, to give us the information which they say we lack. For if our teachings are contrary to the Scriptures, as they would have the Graphic readers believe, surely we need enlightenment. And if they turn a deaf ear to our appeal to them for light, are they not missing their calling?

I did not ask for a debate with the Ministerial Association, as my letter will show; nor do we wish for one. But I did ask for the Scriptures showing that either God or Christ or the apostles have commanded us to observe the first day of the week instead of the seventh as a Sabbath. If these men as "ministers of the Word" cannot furnish such a command from the Bible, is it not time that they if Christians cease denouncing our teachings as un-Scriptural? Christ says, "In vain do they worship Me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." Matt. 15:9. B. J. Cady.

Daydreams.
Dreams will at times reveal to us how little we have forgotten; but the value of dreams as a key to remembrance is distorted and diminished by what seems their lack of selection. They blend the past with the present, or with sheer impossibility. In such a hopeless medley.

At their best our dreams seem fantasies, based upon the real yet wandering from it with erratic inconsequence, of which the possible meaning eludes us. And yet a dream sometimes will revive so much, with miracle as of resurrection. But it is in our daydreams, when reason still retains the controlling hand; that we most surely touch the past; and daydreams are the poetry of memory.

Chaucer.
His best tales run on like one of our inland rivers, sometimes hastening a little and turning upon themselves in eddies that dimple without retarding the current; sometimes loitering smoothly, while here and there a quiet thought, a tender feeling, a pleasant image, a golden-hearted verse, opens quietly like a water-lily, to float on the surface without breaking it into a ripple. He prattles inadvertently away, and all the while, like the princess in the story, lets fall a pearl at every other word. If character may be divided from works, he was a good man, genial, sincere, hearty, temperate of mind, thoroughly humane, and friendly with God and man.—Lowell.

While Food is Short.
"Tain't manners to talk while you're eatin'," said Miss Brown.
"No," answered Miss Jones; "an' wif food scarce like it is, 'tain't good judgment, either."—London Answers.

SYMBOL OF BRUTE FEROCITY

In All Ages the Tiger Has Been Famed for Its Strength, Daring and Deep Cunning.

It is said that the tiger has never been made the basis of a royal emblem except by Tipoo, the famous sultan of Mysore. Tipoo himself was as ferocious as a wild animal and kept near him a mechanical toy representing a life-sized tiger worrying the body of a British soldier. When the toy was wound up the tiger growled and the soldier groaned and Tipoo smiled.

It may be that the tiger, though the ideal of brute symmetry and power, has never attained unto the dignity of a royal emblem for the reason that in every language the word for this animal is a synonym for stealthy, cruel, strong-limbed ferocity. Nature has made the tiger unequalled in the combination of speed, strength, cunning, daring and physical beauty. A tiger's first bounds are so rapid as to bring it alongside an antelope, and a blow of its paw will stun a charging bull. It has been known to spring over a wall five feet high into a cattle pen and to jump back with a full-grown animal in its jaws. Sportsmen say that they have known it to carry away the ball while they were putting up the shelters from which to shoot it.—New York Herald.

No More "Lykerstones."

"Lykerstones," or stones by the roadside for testing coffins on while on the way to the cemetery, are now things of the past in Scotland. The root of the word, which is the old English of Anglo-Saxon "lic," means "a body corpse." These lykerstones were the equivalent of the lichgates, common in rural England.

Many farms bear names after the famous stones, although the spelling is changed somewhat, some being called "Leckerstone" and "Liquorfen." One stone is still at Falkland, built into a wall and vulgarly known as "Liquorstone."

Two of the lykerstones were formerly in the parish of Addie, at the junction of the road from the Den of Linders to the churchyard, but they were removed about the beginning of the last century. They consisted of two upturned boulders of bluish stone, about three feet high, and somewhat square on the sides and top.
