BUSH HIDES HOLLAND'S HILL

But Even at That, the Mound is Justly Appreciated in That Flat Country.

It seems absurd to speak of a hill in Holland; but if the best guessers are right the name of the country is from our word "hollow," meaning a depression in the land. An American, however, found at Groningen a hill that was the showplace of the town. It was artificial.

"There is a fine hill in the Plantage," said his companion, a Hollander, "and from the summit of it you will be able to see the country for a great distance around."

It interested the American greatly to hear that there was such a thing as a hill in Holland.

"But where is it?" he asked, looking around the interminable plain. "I can see no hill."

"It is just over there, but you cannot see it, for it is hidden by that bush!"

The American ascended this fine hill, which proved to be an artificial mound not 20 feet in height, but the natives are very proud of it and speak of it as if it were some huge mountain. As an instance of how successfully a Groninger is deceived by his admiration for the town hill, it may be mentioned that the American's companion heaved a deep sigh, mopped his face and dropped as if exhausted in a chair, thoughtfully placed there by the corporation for this object, when he reached the summit.

But to do this eminence justice it must be admitted that the hill is beyond dispute above the level of the sea—Exchange.

LITTLE ONE SLIGHTLY MIXED

But at Least She Had Done Her Best to Master That Memory Lesson.

Little Dorothy, who is eight years old, dearly loves her school and teacher, and when at home talks a good deal of the week in the classrooms. "Lots of the boys and girls hate 'quotations,' but I like it awfully," she once said. "And what do you mean by 'quotations?'" asked an inquisitive elder. "Why, don't you know? It's something the teacher tells us on Monday, and we have to remember it all the week; then on Friday we go to the platform and say it." "Oh, well, make believe this is Friday, and do it for us now!" Charmed, Dorothy rose, mounted an imaginary platform, gripped her little dress, gave a serious curtsy, and said, with perfect distinctness, "Susie Adam forgets Susie Adam." "What if she does? Give us the quotation." "That's the quotation!" "What! Say it again!" "Susie Adam forgets Susie Adam," repeated Dorothy. Neither questioning nor expatiation availed against this statement concerning Susie, and not until the teacher herself was interviewed was the mystery solved. The quotation was "Enthusiasm begets enthusiasm!"

TRIPS MADE BY MAYFLOWER

Famous Vessel Continued Voyages Long After That One of So Much Historical Interest.

There is matter of interest to Mayflower descendants, and Americans in general, in the recent discovery of letters written some 250 years ago by John Eliot, the "Apostle to the Indians," to his friend, Rev. Joseph Hammer of Barnstable, England. By these old letters it appears that the Mayflower continued making trips to America, and that very many Americans nowadays might justly claim that their forebears crossed to that famous vessel, although not mentioned in Governor Bradstreet's passenger list. The Eliot letters, however, do not name subsequent passengers, although they indicate a bill of lading showing that the Mayflower continued in the shipping trade with New England and was bringing over merchandise 30 years and more after the landing of the Pilgrims. Incidentally the humorists who have often asked how so much ancient furniture could have come over in the Mayflower are answered by the historic fact that the good ship kept coming and going.—Christian Science Monitor.

Salzburg. Salzburg lies on both sides of the Salzach river, hemmed in on either bend by precipitous mountains. A large fortress overlooks it on the south, from the summit of a perpendicular rock, against which the houses in that part of the city are built.

The streets are narrow and crooked, but the newer part contains many open squares adorned with handsome fountains. The variety of costume among the people is very interesting. The inhabitants of the salt district wear a peculiar dress; the women wear round fur caps with little wings of gauze at the side. I saw other women with headresses of gold or silver filigree, something in shape like a Roman helmet, with a projection at the back of the head, a foot long.

The most interesting objects in Salzburg to us were the house of Mozart, in which the composer was born, and the monument lately erected to him.—Bayard Taylor.

The Buddhist Hymnal.

Yamanaka was a strong Buddhist and a leader in the movement to revive and reform Buddhism and establish it as a bulwark against the rapid encroachment of Christianity.

He decided an excellent way to do this was to found a high school for girls which would be more attractive than the Christian women's. So he erected fine buildings and installed modern methods. He hired good teachers. All the paraphernalia of the best western schools was taken over. In fact, the curriculum was about as close as it could be to that of the Christian school not far away. All except as to religion. Buddhism was a prominent feature of the institution—not the old-fashioned Buddhism, but the new form which has borrowed freely from Christianity, even down to the Sunday school hymns. The girls were taught to sing the famous old Christian hymns with only the word Buddha substituted for that of Christ.—The Christian Herald.

Eyes.

Eyes are bold as lions—roving, running, leaping, here and there, far and near. They speak all languages. They wait for no introduction; they are no Englishmen; ask no leave of age or rank; they respect neither poverty nor riches, neither learning nor power, nor virtue, nor sex, but intrude, and come again, and go through and through you, in a moment of time. What inundation of life and thought is discharged from one soul into another, through them! The glance is natural magic. The mysterious communication established across a house between two entire strangers moves all the springs of wonder. The communication by the glance is in the greatest part not subject to the control of the will.—William Ware.

Dresses in Spanish Style.

In his distinguishing black on the forehead and yellow on the throat, the Maryland yellow-throat is one of the most beautifully marked of any member of his tribe and gives an appearance of Spanish grandeur, says the American Forestry association of Washington. There is no mistaking the song of this bird, and it is rendered in a variety of ways which make it sound like any one of the following: "Which-is-it? which-is-it?" or "What-a-pity, what-a-pity?" or "Which-way-sir? which-way-sir?" or "I-beseech you, I-beseech you!" or "Witchery, witchery, witchery." The bird is particularly fond of thickets by the side of running water.

Silly Idea Rebuked.

The late Count de Lesseps never seemed to lose sight of the education of his children, even in the smallest detail. One morning at breakfast a beautiful Dresden teacup was broken.

"Ah!" cried the countess, "a disaster! Two more of that set will now be broken. It always happens so."

"Are you so superstitious?" asked the count, "as really to believe that two more will be broken?"

"I know it."

"Then let us get it off our minds."

And taking two of the cups by the handles he dashed them together.

The angel and dismay of the countess proved conclusively that she had not seriously believed the superstition. It also loosened any hold the absurd idea may have had on the minds of the children.
