

Let Us Re-Mile Your Worn Tires And Make Them Oversize

Worn tire casings are usually worth 75 per cent of the tires' original price. For a fraction of the original cost any casing can be made practically as good as new, with a Miller Ad-On-A-Tire.

Bring your old tires and we will re-mile them with the famous tread that is Geared-to-the-Road.

The Miller Ad-On-A-Tire is built of tough, buoyant rubber. It has several layers of fabric—breaker-strip, tread and side walls, which completely cover the tire and clinch under the rim.

Our process makes the Miller Ad-On-A-Tire an integral part of the tire. It cannot come loose or creep.

Fits all tires, regardless of make,

HIGH SCHOOL AGRICULTURE MAGAZINES

We believe that the best inspirational, informational and illustrative material to be had by the teacher at the present time is to be found in our current magazines. More particularly is this true of the trade papers, magazines that are strictly vocational.

A magazine does not cost such a great amount per copy, therefore when one is found carrying excellent illustrative material it is often desired to cut out such material for mounting. An extra copy or two will be purchased and a benefit is had that a text book never could have given.

Text books must be used to teach fundamental principles, but the greatest aid to the teaching of the methods (art or technique) of a vocation at least, is the current trade magazine.

House organs often furnish material that is to be had from no other source. To be sure, such magazines are general sales publications, but the facts and figures contained therein are every bit as reliable as those in a text book (from which source the author took many of his facts and figures) and are thoroughly up-to-date. No reliable house risks its reputation these days by juggling with figures.

It is the business of the person engaged in education work to be familiar with these sources. His training included such drilling and he is well posted usually.

The practical business man (we speak from experience) does not always avail himself of these helps. Especially is this true of the agriculturist. The doctor is wiser. The lawyer is wiser. The grocer is wiser. Our editor with his "exchanges," etc., is wiser.

Now, please, do not misunderstand us. We aim to help where we can and want our aim rightly understood. The farmer does read. He is widely read man more often than not. But, in the majority of cases, he is read widely in a general way, rather than in a specific way, there being a vast difference.

If you are a general farmer do not be content with subscribing only to a general farm paper like the Pacific Homestead, or the Rural New Yorker.

What is your leading money crop? Fruit? You cannot call yourself a really top-notch, well-posted fruit grower unless you subscribe to a strictly trade paper along your line, as, say, Better Fruit.

Have a specialty or specialties. Push it or them for making money. Carry general lines to save money. That is what the most successful farmers are doing today. We have seen men who grow and sell apples at wholesale prices and then hustle into town in the car and buy lettuce, radishes, cauliflower—yes, even cabbage.

If you sell wholesale, then produce all you can and buy as little as possible at retail prices—that is the whole secret of the highest, most efficient type of farm management.

Read the trade paper or papers that will give you the most specific help from leaders in the particular line you favor.

We invite you to read our department magazines. Ask a high school student to bring same to you. Available over night, or over week ends. The list follows:

Better Fruit; Hoard's Dairymen; Pacific Homestead; Market Growers' Journal; Breeders' Gazette; American Swineherd; Gleanings In Bee Culture; Rural New Yorker (splendid); System On The Farm; The Florists' Exchange; The American Nurseryman; Northwest Poultry Journal; The Oregon Grower.

Oliver F. Kilham, Director Agriculture Department, Newberg High School.

N. B.—The Newberg Graphic equals any trade paper.

JUST SUPPOSING

Here is a man who really ought not to be allowed to live. He has evolved a problem that reduces to mental chaos any man who tries to solve it: Suppose, he says, a pipe, with a bore little larger than the thickness of a man's body, were pierced through the earth, and a ladder ran through the length of the pipe. Assume a man starts through the pipe from London to an antipodean island. He descends the ladder feet foremost, and he is going downward until he reaches the center of the earth. When he reaches the center of the earth he, presumably, will thenceforth be going upward, until he emerges at the antipodes. But how can a ladder on which one is descending become a ladder on which one is ascending? Furthermore, how could one go up a ladder feet foremost?

PRESIDENT WILSON AND THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC

To the Editor—The good women and many of the men of America have been laboring earnestly for over fifty years to abolish the unholy liquor traffic.

Col. Robt. G. Ingersoll called rum the devil's best friend and God's worst enemy. From the first it has been a fight to the finish and a hard fight.

There has been high license, local option, a dry town, a dry county and then a dry state. At last with a might crash the lid went down over the whole nation.

I speak now, not as a prohibition crank (although I voted to make and keep Oregon dry) but as one fond of a "sherry cobbler," a gin fizz, a glass of beer or even a small cold bottle of champagne.

I figure that if part of the country is dry all should be dry.

The purpose of this communication, however, is to humbly discuss the attitude of our "Noble President" toward the unholy liquor traffic.

He is a church member—a Presbyterian, and an ex-college president.

Not many of such are friends of the rum seller.

Being neither a church member nor an ex-college president, perhaps I should let such be heard, but I cannot forbear pointing out what a heroic picture it would make to behold a sick man propped up in his noble bed dictating and signing a ringing veto message to Congress destined to be a great forward step in moral, religious or civic righteousness.

Even if the exertion should cause heart failure and collapse, what an heroic death to die!

But suppose Wilson had collapsed after his futile effort to save the distillers of the South millions of dollars worth of booze with which they hoped to debauch the Nation!

If that had been his last official act where would his name stand in history? School children would need a reading glass to find it.

Would he rank with our other presidents? Yes, he would be the "rank."

His name would be in the column opposite, R. G. Ingersoll, Frances Willard, Gough and other temperance workers, and welfare workers in general would rejoice that congress promptly and overwhelmingly rode over the veto message of the little man.

In 1912 I heard the President of Reed College deplore the petty row between Taft and Roosevelt and contrast them both with "a Woodrow Wilson." How about it now? John U. Smith.
