

WHERE THE GOLD COMES FROM

Twenty states and the territory of Alaska produced gold in 1919, as shown by the report of the bureau of the mint and the geological survey. The big production came from the Rocky Mountain states and the Pacific coast, but a little gold was mined in New England, a little in the south and a little in the Mississippi valley.

Maine, Missouri and South Carolina got in the record by yielding five ounces each. Vermont found 10 ounces, Georgia and North Carolina, 48 ounces, Texas 53 ounces and Wyoming 15.

California led with an output of $40,758 ounces. Colorado came second with 470,998 and Alaska was a close third with 437,131. South Dakota came fourth with 254,820.

The yield of the Pacific northwest, in ounces and value, was:

Washington..... 14,987 $ 309,800
Idaho..... 34,365 710,400
Oregon..... 51,848 1,071,800
Montana..... 119,085 2,461,700

The Philippine Islands produced 39,962 ounces and the total yield, including the United States, Alaska and the Philippines, was 2,329,395 ounces, valued at $58,488,800, a falling off of $10,157,900 from the output of 1918 and of $25,261,900 from the yield of 1917.
