THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1920.

In view of the fact that living costs are now higher than ever before may it not be well to revive the war garden slogan at about this time.

Those who may be coaxed by the prevailing weather conditions to do gardening to any extent this early in the season will have a long time in which to regret it, following the cold rains that are sure to come next month.

Editor Ingalls, of the Corvallis Gazette, a stand-patter of the first water, has been named by the Republican National Committee as a member from Oregon to act with an advisory board of leading republican editors of the United States. Since there is but one editor to represent a state, it is easy to surmise how the fatherly admonition will go up from Oregon.

Jim Stewart, long time editor and publisher of the Fossil Journal but now located at Corvallis, passed through Newberg Tuesday evening on his way to Portland. Jim, witty Scotchman that he is, is the campaign manager in Oregon for Johnson who wants to be president, which we take to be a pretty big contract if it is to be put over in this state.

A letter came to this office today from Hon. W. B. Dennis, of Carlton, saying he had decided to make the race for the nomination on the republican ticket for joint senator from Yamhill, Washington, Tillamook and Lincoln counties. Mr. Dennis was recognized as a hard working, capable representative in the house at the last assembly of the legislature, and he will no doubt be given favorable consideration by a large number of voters when primary election day comes on, May 24.

Much timely admonition that has been handed out to farmers in the past about the loss sustained from leaving implements out in the open to weather the wintry blasts and the scorching rays of the summer's sun, might very consistently be rehearsed to automobile owners who suffer greatly in depreciation by leaving their machines exposed to the weather. This thriftless tendency seems to be most common, too, with a class of auto buyers who go in debt for their machines and consequently can ill afford to suffer loss that might be avoided.

Word comes that Ed Carey, the celebrated Jersey breeder of Carlton, is contemplating making a run for representative to the legislature. Now we realize that it is a most hazardous thing to offer advice to a political candidate and we are not going to risk it, first hand, on Ed, but if any of his friends who are interested should come around we might venture to say to them that they would do well to take Ed around behind the cow barn and tell him that the people of the county believe that Mrs. Carey would make the better representative of the two.

COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING OPPOSED

"Militarism run mad" is the expression many newspapers use in discussing the proposed military training plan for young men.

The Jacksonville Times Union says: "Regardless of party lines Congress knows that the people are for peace, not war, and the protests of the regulars and the appeals of the ammunition makers will not be sufficient to cause the placing of an unnecessary burden on the country in the shape of a big army."

The Pittsburg Sun says: "Enormous sentiment throughout the country against universal military training will have to be overcome if the bill is to become a law."

A billion dollars annually is what the war lords will put over on the taxpayers of the country, it is asserted, if the measure becomes a law.

The Des Moines Register says: "Let nobody deceive himself. The program of Senator Wadsworth and of Congressman Kahn is precisely the program Bismarck persuaded Germany to adopt, and is enforced by precisely the same argument. Universal military training is a scheme to Prussianize America, and is promoted by men who have always been converts to the Prussian theory of the state. The United States has always had the Prussian notion of the army, has maintained Prussian notions of military authority, and in Europe was the nearest to the Prussian standard of any allied military force. The military punishments in the American army were Prussian, and the military discipline also.

"The debate is going to center on this scheme to take the boys at eighteen and to make not so much soldiers as militarists. If this plan goes through the boys will be familiarized with the severest military discipline known to military science. But that is incidental. They will be committed in their thinking to military standards of authority and of government. Just as in Germany in two generations a whole people was converted into a military machine, so here in the only great free democracy left to lead the world we shall be converted out of any real regard for the civilian and for civilian authority."

DALE BUTT STARS AT STANFORD UNIVERSITY

The following news note from Stanford appeared in Wednesday's Oregonian:

"The Stanford University basketball team won its Pacific coast conference game against the University of Oregon five here tonight by a score of 39 to 22. The score at the end of the first half was 15 to 8. The cardinals' eastern style of play, with long passes and long shots for goals, proved to be superior to the visitors' short passing and rush tactics. Dale Butt, of Portland, Oregon, at guard for Stanford, starred, making many long and difficult passes."

Now, who would have thought Dale would go back on Newberg, his home town, and deprive us of all that glory?

WHY HE LEFT TOWN

R. W. Hall, the tire doctor, brought to The Independent the other day a copy of the Enterprise-Chronicle, published at Burlingame, Kansas, which contained an item which appeals particularly to newspaper publishers who never breathe freely until an edition is off the press and it is found there are no mix-ups more or less along the lines of what follows. The item is headed, "Then the Editor Left Town," and after reading it the people will decide that was about all there was left for him to do. Here it is:

A slight mistake was made when the editor of a newspaper got the slugs mixed up in the account of a wedding and an auction sale. When the article was printed it read: "William Smith, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith, and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed of at an auction on my farm, one mile east, in the presence of several guests including two mules and twelve head of cattle. Rev. Jackson tied the knot for the parties averaging 1,250 pounds on hoof. The beautiful home of the bride was decorated with a sulky, work harness nearly new, a rake, a feed grinder and two sets of before the ceremony was pronounced the Mendelsohn's wedding march was rendered by an old milk cow, 10 years old, one Jersey cow and one sheep who, carrying a bunch of bride's roses in her hands, was very beautiful. She wore one light spring wagon, two crates of apples, three ricks of hay, a grindstone of messline-de-sole and trimmings of about 100 bushels of spuds, the bridal couple left yesterday on an extended trip, terms spot cash."—Hillsboro Independent.

NOTICE TO VOTERS

Our county court has found it necessary to make a change in several voting precincts. All voters in precincts 3, 4, 5, 6, 36 and 37 are requested to register. The new boundaries will be carefully explained at the registration office, 508 First street. All voters in precincts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 36, 37 who have changed precincts since last registration will be required to re-register. Registration books are now open and you will save yourselves delay by registering early. It

OH, WAS THAT ALL?

The lady's face was writing under a white veil in a series of remarkable contortions. In one hand she carried an umbrella, in the other a brown paper parcel. Several passersby paused to watch her, some of them wondering whether she expected coppers for her performance. Then a girl acquaintance approached her hurriedly and gazed at her face.

"Why," exclaimed the newcomer, "what on earth is the matter?"

YOU ARE NEEDED!

The facial acrobatics ceased, and a sweet smile succeeded.

"With me? Why, nothing!"
"But you look ill! Your face—
You were twisting it into all sorts of shapes."

The lady held out her hands—one with the paper parcel in it, and the other the umbrella.

"I was only trying," she exclaimed, "to work the edge of my veil down under my chin, dear."
Whereupon the crowd dispersed.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Put a tack in the end of the broom handle and hang it up. It will last much longer.

Boil a little vinegar in frying pans before washing and you will be surprised at the result.

Bits of vegetables saved from the vegetable dishes and dried in the oven are excellent for flavoring soups.

To cook prunes without previously boiling them and without adding more sugar than is already contained in the dried fruit put them into boiling water, cover and cook slowly in the oven.

Lemon juice will take out mildew. If the clothesline is boiled before used it will not stretch.

Wash the piano keys with a damp rather than a wet cloth.

When boiling, a kettle should never be quite full, as it is apt to boil over.

Tea, cocoa or chocolate stains can usually be removed with cold water.

A good cooked salad dressing can be kept for a fortnight in a refrigerator.

Straight hanging dresses are the

WHITE LEGHORN CHICKS

On Monday our first hatch of the season came off and was overflowing—400 more than we had dared to promise. We reason the succeeding ones will be the same. We have sold many thousand chicks this season and have refused many orders but this opens the way to book other orders. We have a hatch every week.
