ONE PIE FOR 3,000 PEOPLE

The English are the most custom-ridden people on the globe. Way back in 1788 the people of the little village of Denby Vale, Yorkshire, wished to celebrate the return to health of their fat-headed monarch, George III. So they baked a great meat pie, and everybody in the village ate a piece. Since that day any unusual national event has been celebrated by baking one of these enormous pies. The last one was baked to celebrate the world's return to peace. It weighed two tons, cost about $1,200, and a whole beef, a calf, a sheep, 650 pounds of potatoes and 600 pounds of flour went into it and 3,000 people ate of it.

ONLY RELICS OF LOST RACE

Network of Canals A/N That Remains of Early Dwellers in the Arizona Deserts.

By far the most interesting remains of the lost people of Arizona are their network of canals which prevail through the valleys. The longest is the one tapping the Gila river and which supplied with water the ancient city, now marked with the one standing building. This is the Casa Grande, about which so much has been written and which has so excited much interest among archeologists in the last ten years.

The volume of water taken out by this canal must have been immense, for it supported millions of acres. In most places the canal has been filled with drifting sand, but its course is easily traced. Engineers who located the Maricopa canal made use of the old Aztec ditch and today water runs over its pebbly bottom just as it did 2,000 or 3,000 years ago.

For miles and miles around mounds tell the tale of houses destroyed by the ravages of time. Phoenix was built on the ruins of this ancient city and there relics frequently are found of this ancient civilization.

Early Meeting Houses.

The earliest New England meeting houses were built in valleys and meadow lands, much the same as the first Old First church in Springfield, for here it was that the homes were located. For a time it was required that all homes should be built within half a mile of the meeting house, for the most part to afford protection to the settlers, since the building did duty as a fort as well as house of worship.

As the population increased and new settlers came into the villages the half-mile radius became too crowded to permit this to continue. It was necessary to go some distance to pasture the cattle and for this reason the law was canceled.
