

Another Royal Suggestion Griddle Cakes and Waffles From the NEW ROYAL COOK BOOK

THERE is an art in making flapjack pancakes, griddle cakes or waffles, call them what you will. But it is an art very easily and quickly acquired if you follow the right recipe. The secret, of course, is Royal Baking Powder.

Griddle Cakes
1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon Royal Baking Powder
2 eggs
1 1/2 cups milk
1 tablespoon shortening
Mix and sift dry ingredients; add beaten eggs, milk and melted shortening; mix well. Bake immediately on hot griddle.

Waffles
2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon Royal Baking Powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups milk
2 eggs
1 tablespoon melted shortening
Sift flour, baking powder and salt together; add milk to yolks of eggs; mix thoroughly and add to dry ingredients; add melted shortening and mix in beaten whites of eggs. Bake in well-greased hot waffle iron until brown. Serve hot with maple syrup. It should take about 1 1/2 minutes to bake each waffle.

THE USE OF WORDS

The English use the word "ill" instead of "sick." Ill is a contraction of evil, and when a person is suffering from the effects of disease, he is not evil, and does not feel so. Sick is an old English word, and was brought to this country by the Puritans, who, as James Russell Lowell has pointed out, had no better English to bring with them than the English of the Bible and Shakespeare.

Americans say "fall" instead of "Autumn." They use the old Anglo-Saxon word instead of an imported Latin word. Both English and Americans say spring, meaning the springing of the leaf and of the plants. Both nations use the word fall, meaning falling of the leaf.

Americans say, "I am staying at the Imperial hotel." An Englishman will tell you that "he is stopping at the hotel."

Stopping what? Americans say, "As soon as Lloyd George finished his speech, the Marquis of Herrington arose." An Englishman will say "directly Lloyd George finished his speech the Marquis arose." The use of "as soon as" is so much more correct than "directly" that nothing further need be said on the subject.

An American will tell you his "coat needs to be repaired," while an Englishman will tell you that coat "wants repairing." The American means that it is necessary to have his coat repaired. The Englishman's statement is logically that his coat wants to have itself mended. There is a difference between "he needs money," and he "wants money." We all "want money."

COVETOUSNESS—IDOLATRY

With this definition of covetousness we are safe in assuming that there is more devout idol worship in this country than is found in heathen mythology. And what a mean, stealthy foe this spirit of covetousness is anyhow. By noisless approach he creeps along until his victim is held firmly in his clutch of death. Once the soul is stirred with generous impulse, and heard the piteous appeals of a righteous cause with the sympathy of helpfulness, and looked with tearful eye at the intolerable burden of poverty. But prosperity has so vitalized the spirit of "idolatry" that now the soul is deaf to the Macedonian cry "Come over and help us," and blind to the piteous sight of rags, poverty and starvation.

We can afford to be poor, ignorant and friendless, but "Good Lord deliver us" from the deadly clutches of covetousness, which is idolatry. If by cheerfully responding to the calls of charity, and opening wide our hands of Christian benevolence, we may thus climb to the exalted height of philanthropy from whence we will not only extend sympathy to the ignorant, the poor and the vicious, but with the most pitiful commiseration will we behold the rich miser as he sinks to rise no more.

He holds to his dollars with the grip of death, until the insatiable archer lets fly the arrow which severs the Gordian knot, and solves the mysterious problem of "How hardly shall a rich man enter the kingdom of heaven?" And when the clock strikes twelve, while the miser still breathes, though it be truthfully said, "He is one of the richest men ever born into the world," yet, when the clock strikes one, and he is silent in death, it may be replied, "Yes, one of the richest men ever born into the world, but now the poorest and most pitiful little soul that ever went out of it."

Better, a thousand times better, be poor as Lazarus with a generous heart, than to be rich and "Clothed in purple" with the soul of a miser.

HOOFED HUMANITY

Hoofs instead of feet will be the heritage which this and succeeding generations, will hand down to future generations, according to the views of Herbert Martin, professor of philosophy at Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Man is headed straight for the hoof stage," said Prof. Martin a few days ago, "and undersized shoes are the cause. The little of toes of this generation are so little because the toe is in the process of disappearing and will in time become extinct."

Explaining how the evolution from feet to hoof will come about, Martin said: "The weight of the body alone is forcing the feet of today into the narrow pointed shoe casings. The result is feet are losing their shape; toes are compressed, corns and callouses follow and the logical result will be hoofs."

Definition You Should Know

A fugee is a piece in which the voices one by one come in and the people one by one go out.
