PLAN TO ERADICATE CHOLERA

Swine Breeders of Indiana County Working to Stamp Out All Traces of Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A county free from hog cholera this year is the goal to which swine breeders in Steuben county, Ind., are working under the guidance of the local county agent and the district veterinarian of the United States Department of Agriculture. As a result of a persistent campaign for the control of cholera and strict organized effort to eradicate it, there has been a remarkable decrease in the disease in the county during the last two years. In 1917 the loss from cholera in the county, according to the county agent, was about $10,000. In 1918 it was a little less than $5,000, and in 1919 it was about the same. In 1920, however, only three cases occurred in the county, which leads the swine breeders to believe that if their efforts to control the disease are continued cholera can be practically eradicated.

BEST LIVE STOCK CHEAPEST

Opinion of Virginia Farmer Who Thinks Breeders Are Aiming to Procure Purebreds.

"From 30 years' experience in breeding thoroughbred horses and later dairy cattle, I have found that the best is the cheapest." This is the opinion of a Virginia farmer in a statement to the United States Department of Agriculture. "I think all raisers of live stock in Virginia are aiming to procure purebred sires."

ter. He served as a scout on the Mexican border and was the first Indian to volunteer his services to Roosevelt when the Colonel was trying to raise a division of rough riders. He has been on the screen in three big productions and appeared on the legitimate stage under Belasco in "The Heart of Wexona."

CHIEF STRONGHEART COMES FROM FIGHTING STOCK

Grandson of Chief Standing Rock, Who Was at "Custer's Last Stand."

Chief Strongheart, noted Indian lecture-entertainer who appears at Chautauqua on the fourth afternoon, is proud of his ancestry. He is the son of Chief Running Elk, who served as scout for General Howard in the Nez Perce War, and the grandson of Chief

Standing Rock who fought at "Custer's last stand."
The Chief is an interesting character.
