Signs stenciled in red ink appeared on all of the store windows about town Thursday morning, cautioning the public about fires. Some of the inscriptions were "Defective chimneys cause fires," "Careless smokers cause fires," "Help prevent fires." A few of the storekeepers were incensed over the signs which appeared on their windows without their consent and removed them, but for the most part the merchants understood that this was merely a part of the fire department's fire prevention week campaign.

In keeping with the observance of Fire Prevention Week, fire drills were held at both the high school and grammar school buildings on Tuesday. At the high school the 225 students were turned out of the building in just one minute and two seconds, while at the grammar school the 615 students were turned out in just one minute and twenty-five seconds. This is considered good time for the first drill of the year. These fire drills at the schools are an excellent thing as they keep the children in training so that they may be turned out quickly in case of fire and they also show up any bad conditions, which might otherwise escape notice until too late. A school fire is of all fires the most horrible, and Newberg is endeavoring to see that any such catastrophe is prevented here.

DIG DEEP FOR WATER.
One of the most famous wells in existence is that at Grenele, in the outskirts of Paris, where the water is brought from a depth of 1798 feet. A well in Pesh was sunk to the depth of 8100 feet in the '70s.

FIFTH CENTURY ART.
The art of shoeing horses to protect their hoofs against the evils of hard usage was unknown to the Greeks and Romans and is first mentioned in the history of the Celts in the fifth century.

FINANCIALLY EDUCATED.
"What did your son learn at college?"
"Well, sir, he can ask for money in such a way that it seems like an honor to give it to him."—The Virginia Reel.

TODAY'S DEFINITION.
A contrary man is one who is at his best when arguing on the side of a subject that he doesn't believe himself.

WHEN YOU PRESS SILK
The iron should not be too warm and unless there is a cloth between the iron and silk, the material should never be pressed on the right side. Iron should be kept moving either across or up and down.

He who borrows and never repays is too great a coward to steal.

PRUNES ARE ON THE MARKET AGAIN

The larger sizes of Oregon Italian prunes have again been placed on the market by the Oregon Growers Cooperative Association.

When the withdrawal of prunes was made by the association in early September it was desired that no further sales be made until it was learned what the proportion of the various sizes would be in order to avoid overselling.

The first week of grading indicates that more than 75 per cent of the prunes in the Willamette valley will be 30-40s and that nearly all of the rest will be 40-50s. The Umpqua valley where the crop was heavier will furnish more smaller prunes but the proportion of prunes of the large sizes is very heavy this season.

Individual lots of Italian prunes from some growers are running more than 50 per cent 20s with nearly all of the rest 30s. This condition has been brought about by the extremely light loads which many orchards bore this season.

On account of the abundance of the large prunes the association has again placed 30-40s on the market and is booking orders at the opening prices announced in August. Nearly a third of the tonnage which the association expects to handle was sold before the early withdrawal and it is probable that the movement will be rapid under the new offerings.

The prunes of this season's crop are of the finest quality and carry an unusually large percentage of sugar due to the favorable weather conditions which prevailed during the ripening season. Almost a negligible amount of damage was done by the light showers during one or two days of harvest and practically no cracked prunes resulted.

TODAY'S BEST STORY.

Rastus, drafted into service, went over the top. He ran afoul of a German shell. When he came into the hospital later, the surgeon told him he had never seen a man so battered up and asked him how it happened.

"Well, boss," replied Rastus, "dey told me to zig and zag when de shells came a-hummin'." Well, I zigged and I zagged, but I guess I zigged where I should of zagged and I zagged where I should of zigged."—Exchange.

EARTH'S POPULATION.

The population of the earth is estimated at nearly 2,000,000,000, certainly not less than 1,650,000,000. There are about 10,000 species of mammal, about 14,000 of birds, 7000 of reptiles and 15,000 species of fishes.

SWAT THE KNOCKER

There's about a half a million ways to run your city down. It doesn't take a plague to hang the crepe upon a town. Death of enterprise may follow from cooperative drouth.

But the worst of all's the knocker with a syncopated mouth. He never has a word of praise for any good acquired. His whine persists; it's tenor's set: "The people make me tired."

"The people ought to do this, and they ought to have more zest!" (When they really ought to send him to an institute for pests.)

He slams the city paper and he doesn't like the judge; 'Gainst everybody, everything, he's got a patent grudge. "The streets are all too narrow, the lighting system's poor."

But ask his aid to modernize—his backing isn't sure. There's one thing sure; the town that's fit to let you make your bread

Deserves the best of your support from heart and hand and head. So while your cleaning up your town and giving poisons new, And swatting flies, just don't forget to swat the knocker too.

Give Your Eyes a Square Deal

You can buy new teeth—but you cannot buy new eyes. You can get along fairly well without hearing, smelling, tasting or feeling, but sight is more indispensable than these four senses combined.

To continue the use of your eyes without the aid of properly fitted glasses, after nature warns you, means laying up worry, trouble and sorrow for the future.
