SAYS WAR HELPED RELIGION

Big Fight Made Soldiers Better Men, Is Assertion Made by Man Who Knows Them.

The American soldier came out of the war with more religion than he went in, according to Rev. Henry Russell Talbot, canon of the National cathedral at Washington, who arises to defend the doughboy from the libel that the "war ruined him."

"He is a better man for having been in the army," asserts the canon, referring to the veteran, the Stars and Stripes states.

Canon Talbot was senior chaplain of the First division of the American expeditionary forces. In a communication to national headquarters of the American Legion at Indianapolis he admits the American, as he saw him in France, was "uncommonly timid in the exercise of his religion. He was frightened at his own religious shadow or he might have been grossly ignorant of the content and practice of his religion."

But as the First division's senior chaplain, the canon was in charge of all the private belongings of the 1,800 Americans killed in the ten days' fighting in the Argonne, and in nine out of every ten of the men's kits found a crucifix, scapular, prayerbook or testament. "And in those days," Canon Talbot writes, "the First division was not carrying anything it did not deem essential."

"There was a kind of collectivism which outruns the ordinary standards of honesty," declares the canon, "but underneath there was implicit, if not explicit, reverence for the Son of Man."

REVEAL THEIR ARMY TRAINING

Ex-Service Men Instinctively Line Up When a Crowd Is Waiting to Be Served.

Army training still manifests itself in civilian life, and former soldiers automatically fall into line when they must wait to be served. In the army the men spent a great deal of their time waiting in line for mess, drawing stuff from the supply sergeant and a dozen other purposes.

The old army training revealed itself strongly during the recent hot spell at the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A., when apparently most of the 10,000 members sought to take advantage of the swimming pool. Crowds of young men stormed the locker rooms each evening. The ex-service men set the example by lining up and taking their turns to reach the gate. As each elevator disembarked its load the former soldiers automatically went to the rear. Younger men who had not had this training and sought to edge in far up the line were promptly pulled out and sent to their station. No ex-service man who has stood in line to draw a pair of socks or get a mess kit full of "slum" will permit anyone to get ahead of him.

Varying Strength of Sunlight

There is practically no such thing as overlighting, writes J. H. Kurlander, in describing for the General Service Quarterly a series of tests made by the lighting service department of the Edison lamp works. He adds: "Investigation of places which are said to be overlighted will usually show that, if anything, they are glaringly underlighted."

These tests showed that sunlight in an open field measures 8,000-foot candle power (which means that it gives the illumination that would be given by 8,000 candles a foot distant). Sunlight in a street between buildings measures 3,000-foot candles. Shadow in a street between buildings measures 300; under a tree in the open, 500. The light on an office desk next to a south window has an intensity of 110-foot candles; one ten feet in, 70, and one 18 feet in, 50. At inside benches between two exposures only 20.

The Guileless Yokel.

James R. Howard, president of the Farm Bureau federation, said in Washington the other day:

"The farmer is going to market his own product hereafter. The farmer of the past, who let the middleman collar all the profit of the farm, was more guileless than Cornelius Husk."

"Corn Husk, you know, came to New York to see his uncle. He got off at the Pennsylvania station and asked a policeman how long a walk it was to his uncle's place."

"You'd better take the elevated," the policeman said, handing back the card with the address on it. "It's a seven-mile walk to where you're going."

"Well, by crinns, I'll walk her, anyhow," said Corn Husk. "Seven miles, though! Say, ain't there no short cut across the fields?"

Memorial for Baxter Dogs.

At the summer home of Governor Baxter of Maine on Mackworth Island, Casco bay, are buried all the dogs owned by him which have died since 1887, says a Boston dispatch to the New York Times. The governor is now having made a bronze tablet, giving the names and record of these animals. This will rest on the face of a big granite boulder, around which the dogs have been buried.

The dogs were all of the same family and strain of Irish setters. The first and great grandmother was Glen-cora, given to the governor in 1887 by his father, the late James P. Baxter of Portland, Me.

The governor has raised about seventy-five of these dogs, and while he has sold a few, most of those he has not kept have been given to friends.

Additional Locals

Mrs. F. W. Houser of Fifth and Wynoski streets received the sad news that her daughter was very seriously ill from blood poisoning at her home at North Platte, Nebraska, and Mrs. Houser left for that place Wednesday evening. The Housers came to Newberg from Iowa last June.

The neighborhood club of north-east of town were entertained at the home of Mrs. W. E. Crozer of Villa Road on Wednesday. Members present were Mrs. A. J. Morgan, Mrs. Minnie Owen, Mrs. A. M. Bohall, Mrs. J. H. Baughman, Mrs. Nancy Pemberton, mother of Mrs. W. E. Crozer and Mrs. Crozer. Refreshments were served.

Grant Van Osdel, who has been in Newberg three weeks visiting his mother and sister on Second street, and other members of the family, went to Portland Sunday to visit his brother, Mack, who is in the grocery business on Union avenue, intending to leave on Monday evening for his home in Crab Orchard, Nebraska. The adjustment of business matters was the object of his coming at this season, as he and his family usually come west for a visit during the summer about every five years. Mr. Van Osdel conducts a hardware and implement business in his home town and has considerable farming land. In speaking of Portland's silver thaw recently while in Newberg, 26 miles up the valley, the air was balmy, he concluded that this valley was a paradise and if he could dispose of his interests in Nebraska, he would gladly locate here.

Bottle Up Your Troubles

Bottle up your troubles, Put in the stopper tight, Though your load seems heavy There are many in the fight.

Bottle up your troubles, Try singing at your work; When you sing the work grows lighter— Singing folks don't shirk.

Bottle up your ailments— No one wants to hear All about your aches and pains; Talk of health and cheer.

Bottle up your troubles, worries, Ailments and the like; Draw a deep breath of fresh air, And take a good, long "hike."

Greet your neighbor with a smile, He will like you better so; Don't forget to cork up tight That bottle full of woe.

Relieve Leader

When flocks of wild ducks and geese have to go long distances they form a triangle to cleave the air more easily, and the most courageous bird takes position at the forward angle. As this is a very fatiguing post, another bird ere long takes the place of the exhausted leader and flies in the van.
