EDUCATION IN OREGON

It is the desire of those interested in education in Oregon to plan for the improvement of the entire educational system from the kindergarten to the university. Naturally, in viewing the entire system, the thought is inclined to linger upon its foundation, the elementary school. In order to plan effectively for the improvement of the public school system, it becomes immediately apparent that two features enter prominently into the development of the schools. These are the material factor on the one hand, including adequate equipment in buildings, school furniture, course of study and text books; and the vital factor on the other hand, consisting in properly trained and cultured teachers.

The institution provided by the state for the training of teachers for the elementary schools, the Normal school at Monmouth, is limited in its capacity. The demand for trained teachers is now outrunning the ability of the Normal school to prepare them, and the demand of students desiring to prepare for teaching has become greater than the Normal school can meet. More students are applying at the Oregon Normal school for admission and training than can be properly accommodated with its present equipment.

This year, the increase in enrollment is more than fifty percent above that of the corresponding date in 1921. Last year the total attendance was more than fifty per cent greater than for the preceding year. Thus, within two years, the attendance has more than doubled. Everything points to a continuation of this increase. Notwithstanding the crowded conditions, practically the same faculty, with only one additional member, aside from critic teachers, is endeavoring to carry on the increased work. A number of the classes register more than 100 students. At least two-thirds of the classes in the Normal school are much larger than they should be, and entirely too large to do the work required of them. It will be impossible to meet the requirements of efficient training of teachers without increased facilities. Moreover, the standing of the Normal school among other similar institutions, as well as its standardization with the U. S. department of education, is jeopardized. There is immediate need along three particular lines, not to speak of plans for future growth. These imperative needs are: additional members of faculty, a new training school at Independence, and increased living facilities for students. Additional class rooms will be a requirement of the near future.

Oregon is at the present time inadvertently neglecting her Normal school and allowing herself to fall far behind other states in her facilities for training her teachers. By way of comparison, states not as large or as populous or as wealthy are providing considerably more for normal school support than is Oregon. Idaho, with a population of only a little more than half that of Oregon, and an assessed valuation of less than half, provides one and two-thirds as much for its normal schools. Arizona and New Mexico with less than half the population and two-thirds the assessed valuation, furnish three times as much each for normal schools as does Oregon. Other states are making corresponding provision for the training of teachers for their elementary schools. Colorado, with a population a little larger and an assessed valuation one and one-half more, appropriates four times as much for its normal schools. Washington, with less than twice the population and about twice the assessed valuation, gives approximately six times as much for normal schools. California, with four times the population and three times the assessed valuation, grants over eleven times as much for its normals.

It is believed that when the people of Oregon know the imperative need of their one institution established in the interest of the boys and girls in the primary and grammar schools of the state, they will not withhold the meagre sum necessary for the adequate support of that institution.

OREGON HAS ONLY WORK OF KIND ON CONTINENT. Fruit growers all over the United States are watching Oregon experiments in fruit products investigations, says C. I. Lewis, managing editor of the American Fruit Grower, Chicago. This is because the work is of universal interest and is being conducted by no other school or station in the whole country.

You have something that no other institution in the United States has," writes Professor Lewis, "and I believe you would do well to give the work a great deal of publicity."

The Fruit Grower carried a three-page, illustrated article on the investigation of products of the station in horticultural products recently, which the editor says will be widely read. The article was written by John C. Burtner of Dufur, a student in agriculture, taking work in industrial journalism, and editor of the student "Oregon Countryman."

THE HULLIN'S WRITE OF TRIP BY AUTO THROUGH CALIFORNIA

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Hullin's letter telling of their trip south, dated November 17th.

We stopped at Laverne two weeks and took a look at the many gas wells. That was a wonderful sight. We then looked over the world's fair grounds. Then on south on the west side of the Coast Range of mountains; a two weeks' stop at San Diego. From there to El Centro in the Imperial valley. Crossing the mountains is quite crooked and heavy grades.

When we struck the Imperial valley the roads were paved as it was a desert sand for a good distance and nothing growing. That did not look good to us. One man said he had lived there eight years and that alfalfa did not average more than two tons to the acre in one year.

The weather is very pleasant during the day, and the nights are about the frost point. The ground is full of alkali, so I think in a few years they will have to raise beets to draw it out of the ground as irrigation brings it to the surface.

They raise nice dates and grape fruit but no oranges or lemons here. The greater part of the valley is desert. It is about 30 or 40 miles wide and 150 miles long, and most of it is below sea-level.

The Salton sea is 248 feet below sea-level. We camped close to it one night. It was all worth going to see. Westward two nights at Riverside and then came back to Laverne. This is the orange belt. Plenty of snow on the hills near here and some of the orange men are ready for smudging. Some of the orange groves are showing color.

We drove to Glendora one afternoon and when we got back we were most frozen. While we were at Riverside it hailed and poured down rain, and thundered and lightning flashed.

About uck-shooting, we came on the east side of the Sacramento river and did not pass through the rice fields. One man told me there were more hunters than ducks.

We have not seen any game except a few quail. I have not shot my gun since I started. The days are warm and bright and the nights cool. While in the Imperial valley we went to Calexico and over into Mexico. On the Mexican side there are all Mexicans and most of them Mexicans on the U. S. side of the line. There are officers on either side of the line to see that no goods are smuggled across without paying duty.

December 14th, at home in Pomona, California, three miles from Laverne and 25 miles from Los Angeles. A nice day but it rained yesterday. It just flooded the town. In some streets it was from one to two feet deep. Some cars got in so deep they were stalled. It has been raining for about two weeks. I am putting in my time in a real estate office.

Household Hints

Use cold water when scrubbing boards. It does not sink into the wood so quickly as hot water does, and it dries more quickly and removes stains more satisfactorily.

A good stiff brush is useful when washing clothes. It can be applied to dirty cuffs and neckbands.

To keep silver untarnished when not in use for a long time pack it in dry flour.

Charcoal powder is effective for cleaning knife blades which have become stained.

Add a few drops of lemon juice to eggs while being scrambled. It will improve the taste.

Mirrors should be cleaned with ammonia water. Do not let the direct rays of the sun fall on the glass if it can be avoided, as the sunlight affects the metallic coating on the back of the mirror.

Did you ever notice that those who change their minds often never seem to get a good one in the process?
