White & Hill this week moved from Deschutes into their brand new market on Wall street opposite the B. M. Co. Here they have facilities which they have long needed for conducting a first class market. Their inaugural display of decorated carcasses was a new thing for Central Oregon, and drew much admiration. Fifteen large beaves, and pork and mutton galore, reminded one of a large Portland market at holiday time.

C. M. Weymouth receives a paper from his sister, at Fairbanks, Alaska, the new and flourishing camp on the Tanana river half way between Dawson and Port Valdes, which shows that modern institutions have penetrated that far country. This paper, is a semi-weekly, the type is set by machine, it has plenty of fresh telegraphic news and is decently edited. It is just half the size of The Bulletin. Its price is 25 cents a copy, $2 a month, $20 a year. Mr. Weymouth spent six years in the Yukon country, going in just before the big boom of 1897.
