FRIDAY - MAR. 31, 1905

The advent of March was lamb-like enough to suit the most exacting, and its exit is leonine enough to suit any but the most unreasonable persons. Thus do the adage receive another exemplification.

General Kuropatkin retired from the head of the Russian army and accepted a subordinate position but the fact remains that he is by far the ablest Russian in the field and if more heed had been given his recommendations Russian arms would not now be in such plight.

Every railroad report these days involves Central Oregon, with Bend as the hub; the auto line this week started its roundhouse in Bend; a large fruit development project for this region has just been put in shape; government experiments work has been set going here this week; sawmill men are coming into the country with apparent assurance that transportation will soon be provided; there are 200 children in this part of the school district now as against 85 in the whole a year ago; 3477 silly rumors have been spawned this week; fish will begin biting tomorrow, and all is well.

The city council passed Tuesday night the license ordinance which has been famous for two months. And it passed the ordinance practically without change from the form in which it was introduced. The measure is famous because it never contained what was attributed to it. It never contained a hint of licensing general business. No such proposal was ever before the Bend council. But a lot of people refused to look at the fact and chose rather to get heated and uncomfortable over a purely imaginary thing.

"If to hope overmuch be an error
"Tis one that the wise have preferred;
And how often have hearts been in terr.
Of evils that never occurred!"

STILL BEND IS GROWING.

Reduction of the pay of construction forces on the reclamation work has had the effect of greatly lessening the number of men and teams employed—reducing them to about one-third the number that was on the work at the highest. This, of course, has had its effect on the business of Bend, as it would in any community. But Bend's business and prosperity are not bound up in the fortunes of a ditch construction camp. In the very nature of the case construction activity was bound to be temporary. Construction forces must soon move on. Their presence lent a certain activity that departs with them. If any one was fooled into the belief that the prosperity of the locality depended upon these camps he was very unwise.

We may speculate upon the meaning of the recent acts of the reclamation company which have had the effect of curtailing operations, but the facts of the business are not made public. Most of the gossip that is spread about is absurd. The Deschutes Irrigation & Power Co. appears to have its own reasons; it pays its obligations in full and promptly and it has no notion of abandoning the half a million dollars already spent here.

operations. That way may not be just our way but this is a land of liberty and the rule that a man may do as he pleases with his own, provided he does not thereby injure others, will hold good here, as elsewhere.

In so far as the reduction of construction forces has the effect of turning attention more to productive industry it is a positive benefit to the community. When we lose sight of the fact that the basis of all prosperity is productive toil we are upon dangerous ground. We may swap towns lots and jackknives with each other and imagine we are getting rich, but the inevitable readjustment will jolt that nonsense out of us and teach us finally the virtue of the homely wisdom we fancied we had outgrown.

An occasional jolt will do Bend good. Living has been too easy here. People have had too much of the freedom that makes meddling. Adversity is a great civilizer. It teaches respect for struggling neighbors as well as self reliance. Human nature is such that it holds as cheap that which is not obtained by hard knocks. So Bend, in truth, is growing.

BEND SCHOOL CHILDREN.

More Than Twice as Many as Were Here Last Year.

Notwithstanding the school district has been recently split in two from the Laidlaw district, there are more than twice as many children of school age in the Bend district this year than there were last year—200 as against 85. School Clerk Adges has nearly completed his census, which is a record of those residing in the district on the 25th day of February. He submits the following list and invites corrections and additions:
