Complaint was made in justice's court and a warrant issued for the men. George Anne was appointed special constable to serve it. After a hard drive he found the defendants in camp at the snow line beyond Sisters. He seized the dog and arrested all the men, but his jaded team could not haul them back. So the officer permitted the offenders to make a deposit to cover all expenses and to surrender the dog, which was valued at $100. So the matter now rests at this stage and valuable dogs in these parts are safer.
