TIMBER LAND WANTED

I have completed arrangements whereby I can handle a number of good timber claims, in the Deschutes timber belt, at once. Title must be perfect. I have special inquiry just now for land in Tps. 21, 22, 23 and 24 S., R. 11 E., and if parties owning land there will communicate with me, it may result to the advantage of all concerned.

SHANIKO -- KLAMATH

Engineer Graham Talks of the Survey.

WILL STICK TO THE RIVER

Preparing For Rapid Railroad Construction in the Spring--Natron to Ontario Too.

Engineer J. R. Graham, in charge of the Oregon Eastern survey work south of Madras, spent most of the week in Bend. He came in Tuesday, yesterday made a trip up to The Meadows and left today to return to camp which, when he left, was at Lone Pine, on the north side of Crooked river. It is now about to be moved to the vicinity of Redmond. It will probably be three weeks before the engineers reach Bend.

"We are not making much use of the old Columbia Southern Extension survey," said Mr. Graham to a Bulletin man. "We have the notes and maps of that location but do not follow them at all closely. It serves us merely as a reconnaissance."

"We are not making permanent location of a railroad, only a preliminary survey. We expect to complete the preliminary line to Klamath Falls by midwinter, if the snow does not get too deep in that country, and then immediately to locate the permanent line. One party will probably work back from Klamath Falls and I shouldn't be surprised if another crew were sent out from Shaniko, and even another set of permanent locators put in the middle of the route. I am looking forward to a large amount of rapid railroad building in this quarter next year."

"Why do you people leave that gap between Madras and Shaniko, if the design is to build from Shaniko to Klamath Falls?" asked the reporter.

"Well, you see there isn't much choice of route between those two points," replied Mr. Graham. "It is that one line or nothing, and we may regard the preliminary work there as completed. South of Madras there are many possible routes and a pretty thorough examination of the country was necessary to find the best one. But all this is very easy construction and the work of building the railroad will go fast when once actually under way."

"The route? Oh, I can't say just where the line will be located, but it looks to me now as if we would have to stick pretty close to the river from Bend south."

Mr. Graham was formerly in the service of the California North-eastern, the Weed road, which is now building toward Klamath Falls. He received an injury which sent him to the hospital and when he came out he took the present work. The presumption is that the Weed road and the Shaniko line will meet at Klamath Falls. That will give the Harriman lines a route between the Columbia river and San Francisco that will avoid the frightful Siskiyou. And it will also occupy a region that Hill has his eye upon.

Mr. Graham had no doubt that the line from Natron to Ontario would also be built. He would express no opinion relative to the Corvallis & Eastern, though he admitted that with another railroad in Central Oregon the strategic value of the Hammond line would be destroyed and the property would then be worth only what it would inventory.

Another stove, in addition to the one already there, has been put in the church, and the building can now be made entirely comfortable for those attending services.

Fixing Up Our Weather.

Edward H. Beals, United States forecast official at Portland, spent last Sunday in Bend. He came from the south, having been at Klamath Falls for the irrigation celebration in which Governor Chamberlain and other state officers participated, and then over to Lakeview and around by Paisley and Silver Lake to Bend. It was his first visit through this part of Oregon and gave him a new idea of the state. Incidentally he inspected all the weather observatories along the route and was able to suggest improvements in the service at most of them.

"The importance of a reliable weather record for a series of years is hard to overestimate," said Mr. Beals. "The longer such record is kept the more valuable it is. Personal recollections are unreliable. Bend has a good start with its meteorological record and we wish it to be continued."

THREE TEACHERS NEEDED.

More than a Hundred Children in the Bend Schools.

One hundred three pupils are enrolled in the Bend schools and 97 are in daily attendance—a percentage of attendance that probably is not exceeded, if approached, elsewhere in the state. A dozen or more children are yet in sight for the schools. Already some of the smaller ones have been sent home because of the crowded condition of Miss Jones's room and now arrangements are being made for a third school room and teacher. The division contemplated will be something like this: Primary room, first and second grades, 36; intermediate room, grades 3, 4 and 5, 34; grammar room, grades 6, 7, 8, and 9, 28. Steps are being taken to install the 9th grade work regularly. It will take a vote of the district to do this after certain preliminaries are adjusted.

"I am glad to see that you are going to have a fine new schoolhouse, one adequate to the needs of the district," said Superintendent Dinwiddie when he was in Bend last week. "You will make no mistake by pursuing a liberal policy in this regard. The Bend school district is rich and can well afford to put $6,500 into a new building. You now have most excellent schools and should have the new house, so that the teaching facilities will keep pace with the growing demand. You are fortunate in having teachers so well qualified and so interested in the welfare of the schools and I have no doubt the tax payers will support the present policy of providing the very best."

Hens Know A Good Thing.

The desire for chickens has raged in Bend this fall and many families have added a hen to their possessions. One lot of fine barred Plymouth Rocks was brought down from an up-river ranch by a Bend citizen who built a highly scientific coop for them. For three days before the coop was ready, however, the fowls were housed in a large drygoods box, where they were quite comfortable and contented. Every night they voluntarily sought their roosts there. When the new house was about completed the carpenter went away for some article he needed, leaving the door closed. When he returned to minutes later all the chickens had gathered at the door of the new coop and when it was opened they went in and made themselves at home. They never had been there before and there was no sign painted on the new chicken house, but the sagacious fowls recognized it and when they became settled in their new home they immediately began laying.

This structure differs from most of the kind in that it has a ventilating shaft reaching from the floor up through the roof. At the bottom and near the roof are openings for air. When the weather is cold the top hole will be closed, thus keeping the warm air in while the impure cold air from the bottom may continue to pass out.

The Rev. J. A. Mitchell will not preach as usual on the third Sunday of this month, but instead will preach on the fourth Sunday, Nov. 26. Subject for 11 a. m. "Thanksgiving." Subject for 7:30 p. m. "Run Speak to that Young Man!"

Word has been received from Percy Walzer that his mother is improving rapidly and he expects to return to his homestead soon.

Scholarly Indians Bring Barley.

Two Indians came over from Warm Springs this week with 90 bushels of barley for the Bend market. They were offered 70 cents a bushel at Forest and 48 cents at Redmond, but concluded to bring their loads to Bend, where they got 90 cents a bushel. This was their first visit to Bend but they had heard much about the place and were pleased by their experience here.

They sold to the Pilot Butte company. When they went to the office for their pay Miss Midlam wrote out a check to Cash and went over to the bank and got the money for them, it never occurring to her that Indians could make any use of a check. Then she was puzzled to know how she could get from them some evidence that the bill was paid, but finally passed a receipt to one of them and asked him to put a mark on it. "I don't know as I can write very well," he said as he removed his glove. Then he took the pen and wrote his name in the proper place—Harry Miller—in the most beautiful script imaginable. And Miss Midlam has hardly got her breath back yet.
