NO LONGER IN DOUBT

Summary of First Season's Farming.

DESCHUTES LANDS ALL RIGHT

Soil and Climate Place Agriculture Here on a Firm Basis--No Frost to Trouble

The agricultural possibilities of the Deschutes lands have been a matter of great concern. The past season's experiences show what may be done here and they are indicative of a good future for this country. Many newcomers have been engaged in farming this year, and various field and garden crops were tried on the D. I. & P. Co.'s best grounds two miles east of Bend. On that farm all root crops did remarkably well. The results with sugar beets were very gratifying, as shown by analyses heretofore published. Potatoes gave fair yields and small grains filled tolerably well and produced as well as could be expected on new land. Alfalfa sown in June made an excellent showing. Red clover made a satisfactory growth, and that forage about will probably prove a valuable crop in this locality. The hairy or sand vetch, planted in the summer of 1904, made a luxuriant growth, the vines being six feet long by the 8th of July this year. All hardy vegetables did well, and in quality were equal to those grown in other irrigated sections. In the natural soil carrots yielded 15 tons per acre and turnips 18 tons. On manured ground they yielded twice as much, single carrots weighing three pounds and turnips 11 pounds. String beans, summer and winter squash, cucumbers and pumpkins matured, and marketable roasting ears of sweet corn were produced.

The Yakima or furrow system which was employed generally over the farm, was found to be a very good method of applying water and quite practicable in this district. On our soil the furrows should be 24 to 30 inches apart. The grain planted in April requires two to three irrigations, while that sown a month later had to be irrigated three to four times. The garden vegetables were irrigated seven times, the sugar beets five times and the potatoes two times. The amount of water applied at any one irrigation varied from four to seven inches. The irrigation period for small grain was about 50 days, for sugar beets 70 days and for garden vegetables 90 days. No killing frosts occurred on the farm from May 21 to Sept. 29. The farming operations of this year have shown that our soil is sufficiently productive and the climate favorable enough to place farming here on a firm basis.

WHO OWNS THE HOGS?

Question involved in Two Cases in Court.

The affairs of the Bend Livestock & Produce Co. got into court this week in both civil and criminal actions. The charge of larceny preferred by Adam Kutzman against Charles H. Bettie and Oliver Erickson, was dismissed. Property in controversy, 53 hogs, was taken under replevin by Kutzman and redelivered to White & Hill. The rights to this property remain to be tried.

The butchering and market business formerly conducted by C. H. Erickson was last spring turned over to the Bend Livestock & Produce Co., a corporation organized for the purpose. The stockholders and directors are Charles Boyd, who owns one half the stock, and Mr. and Mrs. Erickson, who own the other half. Later the Ericksons desired to retire from business and Boyd wished to continue, from which inharmony has developed that is now in court.

The specific bone of contention was a band of hogs, Erickson, who was secretary and treasurer of the corporation, had sold the animals to White & Hill, and Boyd, who was president and general manager, had sold to Adam Kutzman. Oliver Erickson and Lester Menear were driving the hogs to deliver them to White & Hill when Boyd and Kutzman appeared and claimed them and they were turned into Kutzman's field and Kutzman paid

Boyd for them. Soon thereafter the three Ericksons went to Kutzman's and took the hogs, Kutzman being unable to hold the animals against the other three. Then the larceny charge was made and the Ericksons were arrested. A replevin suit was also begun.

From the evidence adduced at the examination before Justice Lawrence the rights to the property appeared to be so much mixed as to leave the larceny charge not established. Therefore, that case was dismissed. Incidentally the parties were advised to submit their affairs to arbitration. Unless some settlement is made the right to the property will be tried in the replevin case now pending.

No Scoundgery in Mail Contract

In view of the persistent effort of speculators in mail contractors to get a footing in the carrying contracts soon to be awarded in this region, the department has sent out a warning letter with the request that postmasters exert themselves to make its contents known and to prevent speculative bids. Postmaster Grant this week received one of these notices, in which the department reiterates its policy "to place the contracts for carrying the mails in the hands of responsible men living upon the routes, who will either perform the service in person or give their active personal supervision to its performance and who shall receive the full compensation paid by the government for the service and shall not share any part of it with any speculators. Any representation that the speculators may make that they are in position before the department to secure an advantage over local bidders is absolutely false."

Desert Springs.

Frank Arnold, of Redmond spent Monday and Tuesday at his old home. Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Fryrear went to Prineville on business the latter part of last week. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Nichols spent Sunday in Clatskanie Falls. Herbert Glaser and Mrs. Nellie Shaw were united in marriage in the Prineville court house Nov. 13. They will make their home on Mr. Glaser's farm near Desert Springs. DIED--Sunday, Nov. 12, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hodson. Interment took place at Squaw Creek cemetery Monday afternoon. Many friends extend their sympathy to the bereaved couple. An entertainment and basket social will be given at Desert Springs school house, Nov. 27, beginning at 7:30, for the purpose of securing funds with which to fence the cemetery. All are cordially invited.

Catholic Church Items.

The Rev. Father Hickey will make his Christmas visitation to Bend and surrounding country the first week in December and will celebrate mass in Bend Sunday December 3rd at 9:30 o'clock a. m. Father Hickey will also lecture in the hall in the afternoon of the same date at 3 o'clock. Father Hickey desires to have all his people present on Sunday Dec. 3rd as he desires to submit to them plans looking to the development of church affairs in Bend country. He also wishes that his people would notify strangers and newcomers of his visit to Bend. His lectures are free and all are invited to attend.

Broke the Combination.

PRINEVILLE, Or., Nov. 24--Last week the county court received bids for the publication of the annual delinquent tax list. The statute says this advertisement shall be at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per nonpareil line. The Review presented, as usual, a bid of 25 1/2 cents a line, and the Journal, as usual, 25 cents a line. But papers outside the county seat were on hand this time and The Bend Bulletin's bid of 12 cents per line was promptly accepted. The publication is to be, in the words of the statute, "once each week for four consecutive weeks."

Death of C. E. Lovell.

A card received by The Bulletin this week announces the death of Consider E. Lovell at Denver, Col., on the 16th of November, from cancer of the stomach. Mr. Lovell came out to Bend from Columbus, Ohio, a year and a half ago and was purchasing agent for the D. I. & P. Co. for more than a year, when his health failed. The family left Bend about three months ago. Mr. Lovell was about 65 years old. He served in the civil war and had been a man of much force and at one time owned large business interests. He lived an active and honorable life.

ANOTHER DITCH LINE

Walker Basin Enterprise on its Feet.

WILL WATER 31,160 ACRES in the Neighborhood of Rosland--Preparations for Construction Work in the Spring.

Another important reclamation enterprise in the Deschutes valley is set on foot by the approval of the Walker Basin enterprise of the Oregon Development Company. The segregation of 31,160 acres in the Rosland neighborhood was approved by Secretary Hitchcock last week and sent up for the signature of the president. Two or three men have been set at work preparing for extensive construction work in the spring, and great activity is assured for next season. This enterprise is managed by J. E. Morson, who has been its guiding spirit from the beginning, five years ago. The original corporation has been succeeded by the Deschutes Land Company, however, of which Mr. Morson is president, Lester Turner, jr., vice-president and A. A. Aya, secretary-treasurer. The present head office of the corporation is in Portland. The original application was for some 65,000 acres, but it was soon found that an error had been made and a large area of fine timber was included in the segregation asked for. The clearing up of this matter has taken a long time and a lot of work, but now 31,160 acres are approved. President Morson says he has already arranged for a lot of fine machinery for construction of this irrigation plant and is confident it will be completed by the spring of 1907.

A Singing Flycatcher.

Bend has some flycatchers that do not accord with the book characteristics of those useful birds. For example Lord's book on Oregon birds says the flycatchers of the west have no song, only a call, which is rather strident. Bend is visited every fall by a number of flycatchers, which sit in the tree tops and call to each other, the call being a short plaintive whistle. These birds are a little smaller than the robin and of more graceful build. Their prevailing color is slate, with under parts of slightly lighter hue and wings and head black. But these birds are great songsters. They have a long and varied song of marvelous sweetness, greatly discounting that of the redbreast at its best. The flycatcher is something of a ventriloquist, too. He will sit in a tree over your head and sing boldly one moment and the next he will so throat his notes that they will appear to come from a tree 50 yards away. Every bird has his own tree and if any other of his species tries to live in the same tree there is trouble.
