FRIDAY - DECEMBER 7, 1905

Bend's schools, already unsurpassed of their class, are to be held to their high standing. The taxpayers will cheerfully provide the necessary facilities, as was evidenced by the bond election. It costs money to provide good educational advantages, but the community can make no investment that will bring it larger returns.

Note should be taken of the fact that all the city officers to be chosen next Tuesday, except two aldermen who are to fill vacancies, are to hold for two years each. The statute provides that there shall be a general city election every year, from which the inference was drawn that the term of city officers was to be one year. However, it is clearly stated in the law that the term of mayor, recorder, treasurer and marshal shall be two years, after the first term.

It is, of course, useless to enter into an academic discussion of the issues in the municipal campaign. In a small community like this every voter bases his action on information at first hand. The affairs of the town have been economically and fairly conducted in the past year because the men in responsible positions have been themselves interested in the city's welfare. So it should be continued. Most cities require their officers to be owners of real estate within the city, and it might be a wise thing to have such an ordinance in Bend. However, the Bend election next week will probably turn on a totally different issue. It is a fight for control of the council.

The Oregon Eastern surveyors on the route between Madras and Bend are now camped near Redmond and working on the preliminary location. The Dalles Southern has let a contract to Allingham's mill, on the Metolus, for 2,000,000 ties to be delivered where the road will cross the Deschutes river, near Warm Springs agency. Gould is said to have acquired the Oregon Water Power & Railway property for an entrance to Portland, and to be preparing to push that line across the Cascades through the Minto pass to Bend and on south to Lakeview and a connection with the N. C. & O., which Gould recently bought. The St. Paul declares its purpose to build through Montana, Idaho and Washington to Puget sound and the Northwestern is coming to Boise and across Central Oregon to the coast. This is the railroad news of the week boiled down. The St. Paul is the only one that leaves Bend out of its calculations.

PLEASE HELP THE BLIND.
The Prineville Review, now as ever Bend's sweetest friend, drops this characteristic remark:
A year from now there will be people here, if some of the Bend people don't stop knocking themselves, who will wonder why such a town (as Bend) was ever placed on the map.
Maybe and perhaps there's no thing but an inevitable thing that will be the case in a few years.

Review, has in store for this unsuspecting old world. Up to date, however, no institution at Bend has grown so helpless and discouraged, so flabby and flaccid, as to send forth such a plaintive whine as the following, which also appeared in the Review last week:

We are about to send out some more subscription duns, and hope who ever receives them will give the same full consideration. The financial needs of a print-shop are numerous and pressing, and nothing makes an editor feel so badly as to be unable to pay up. Kindly help us out.

Therefore, good people, please help the blind—and false and corrupt and ignorant and prejudiced and dirty. Having no principles they need the money.

The Review can't mend its own fortunes by knocking Bend. Bend is all right and it will continue to thrive when the Review is gone and forgotten. For the present, let the galled jade wince.

Notice.
