Robert Gathergood, who is working for White & Hill, had a team of horses down in the ditch east of Bend last Sunday. He drove into the ditch where the road crosses it to get water for use in the slaughter house, and then attempted to turn around by circling down the ditch a short distance. One horse got mired in soft ground and fell in such a manner that its head was held under water. The other, in the rumpus that followed, also got down but did not thrash about any. Gathergood was obliged to get out into the water and help the one mired or he would soon have had a drowned horse. Fortunately no damage was done to the harness or rig.

J. N. Hunter returned Tuesday from a trip to Silver Lake. He reports that within the past few months 113 claims have been filed upon in that vicinity and that the country there is settling up rapidly. Water can be obtained at a depth of from 15 to 20 feet. At that depth a yellow sand is found and upon digging into it a foot or two water begins to flow and rises four or five feet in the well, remaining at that height. Chrisman of Silver Lake has installed an electric light plant at his hotel and uses a gasoline engine for power. This plant is also used to light the town. The farmers near the village intend to wire their residences and will conduct the current to their homes.

LOST HIS WAY.

Tramped in the Woods Two Days and Nights without Food.

Lost in the timber two days and two nights without a bite to eat was the experience of Michael Rogers a few days preceding Christmas. Mr. Rogers has a homestead in 21-15, in the vicinity of the ice caves, and one day started out to hunt. He wandered into the woods some distance from the beaten paths. As darkness came on and he desired to return home he found that he could not tell north from south nor east from west, could not find the road, and therefore was lost. That night he had enough matches to keep a fire burning. In the morning he started again in the vain search for his homestead and tramped all day. Night found him still far from any human habitation, with the supply of matches exhausted, no fire, and no food. Consequently he tramped all night in order to keep warm. The following day was spent in the same unsuccessful search for home.

About 9 o'clock that night, Saturday, Dec. 23, L. H. McCann was awakened at his homestead in 19-12 by hearing what he at first supposed was a cougar crying in the timber. Listening a moment he heard the call repeated and fearing it might be someone in need of help he opened the door and answered. Immediately the question came out of the darkness, "Where are you?" Mr. McCann told the questioner to come north, and upon being informed that he didn't know which way was north, got a light and put it where it could be seen, whereupon Rogers soon stumbled into the cottage. He was almost exhausted by his long tramp and fast and sank upon the floor, too tired to stand. Mr. McCann prepared a supper for him, gave him a bed for the night, and in the morning stocked him with a day's provisions and took him to the ice cave road, where he soon located himself and easily found his way home. He had been going directly away from his homestead and was distant about 24 miles from home, but had walked much farther in his wandering through the woods.
