FRIDAY, MAY 4, 1906

MOYER-HEYWOOD-PETTIBONE.

At the June term of court at Caldwell, Idaho, the leaders of the Federation of Miners, Moyer, Heywood and Pettibone, will be placed on trial for the murder of Ex-Governor Steunenberg.

A legal battle will be waged in this little Idaho town which will fix the attention of the whole country upon it and which will be fought by the best legal talent stimulated to its highest effort.

The murder of Steunenberg is one of the consequences that has followed the Coeur d'Alene strike of 1892 with its record of murder and violence on the part of the federation, offset by outrage and disregard for law on the part of the state authorities.

In 1902 the people of Colorado passed an amendment of the constitution providing for an eight-hour labor law. A large majority of the legislature was pledged to vote for such a law but to this day it has not been passed and no one can any more doubt that the corporations and political corruption was behind its defeat.

We cannot defend for a moment the lawlessness of unionism—anarchy of the bludgeon; but on the other hand we cannot excuse that other lawlessness—anarchy by trickery—that underhanded, crawling lawlessness that corrupts legislatures and courts and breaks the higher law.

In the zeal to serve the interests of his class Governor Steunenberg trod upon the rights of American citizens; in their blind rage, after many years his victims struck him down and at the same time inflicted permanent injury upon the cause they sought to serve.

ABOUT RAILROAD RATES.

Under the present law regulating the Interstate Commerce Commission, the railroads have the power to fix rates on interstate traffic and any shipper who feels himself aggrieved may attack that rate in court as being unreasonable.

The interstate commerce commission was created in 1887 and in spite of its existence, great monopolies like the Standard Oil Company and the beef trust have grown up, monopolies that owe their existence to favoring rates granted by the railroads.

In the Hepburn bill now before the senate it is proposed to give the commission the power to establish a maximum rate after the complaint is made and after all interested parties are given an opportunity to be heard.

The zeal with which the rail road interests are fighting this feature of the bill indicates that it is an effective remedy for the evil of rate discrimination.

The most shocking details of the San Francisco horrors is the apparently wanton killing of citizens by members of the state militia. Reports come of the shooting in cold blood of men and even woman and children.

The most prominent victim is H. C. Tilden a well known merchant who was shot by a party of California National Guardsmen while riding in his automobile engaged in relief work.

After partaking of a bountiful repast of yellow-legged gump a la fricasee; pacted Java, extractus bovinus; H 200 lactal fluid; mashed murrhies; angels' food and deviled eggs; printer's disgrace, sunshine, liquid air, seldom seen; library paste and wireless telegraphy pudding—then treated to several hours discourse encompassing a period of American history and local family genealogy of my lordship, the "deestrick" clerk, from the time of "Honest Abe" up to the present age of dishonesty, and concludes the evening's lecture by a side-splitting joke from "Peck's Bad Boy" and you retire.

The farmers' meeting which is to be held in Bend in the near future should have the cordial support and co-operation of every person who is interested in the development of this region.

The interests of the settlers in an irrigated country are closely identified, much more so than in a community where humid farming is practiced. All depend upon the same source for prosperity—the water supply.

Each water user is bound to consult, to some extent at least, the convenience of his neighbor in the use of the life-giving stream. In a new irrigation community, too, the majority of the farmers have had little or no experience in handling water for irrigation.

Their success is absolutely dependent upon acquiring such knowledge. By means of these farmers' meetings the settlers can come together in social intercourse and at the same time gain much practical knowledge of irrigating through discussion and the addresses of experts upon the subject.

The chief objection to farm life has always been its isolation; the cause of that objection may be largely removed by frequent social gatherings like these farmers' meetings. Let everyone attend and do his part toward making the coming farmers' meeting at Bend a success.

Chinatown Laid Bare.

Tales are told, partly mythical, no doubt, of the secrets of Chinatown laid bare—voiceless but suggestive—by the earthquake and fire. Joss houses and mission schools; stores filled with quaint wares and repulsive looking edibles, opium dens, gambling halls and theaters with their gaudy trappings—all went down before the fiery hurricane.

remains on this once populous site only holes and runways, showing depths of which the police never knew. These holes pit the hillside like swallows' nests. Uncovered by fire, they disclose the burrows of human creatures who seldom saw the light.

Reveries of a Tramp Pedagogue.

ZINDEL, Wash., April 21st.—As the ferryman takes me over the river and visions of the distant cemetery accompanied by ghosts, goblins, elves and imps flit through my muddled mind, I imagine I am crossing the river Styx into the lower regions, the realms of Persephone, and my imagery has a great deal of reality when I am respectfully ushered into the austere presence of the president of the school board.

Did you ever have the mortification of meeting one of these veteran "rural deestrick" combinations of clerk and president of the board of "education"? He invariably is quite bald, with shaggy eyebrows and brass spectacles that pose half way over his prominent nose, one bow is broken off and is held secure by a cord loop around his ear. He never looks through his glasses, always over them.

He is the "deestrick" squire, deacon of the church, township assessor, road supervisor, chairman of the local campaign board, reporter for the department of agriculture, volunteer weather observer, insurance, fruit tree and lighting rod agent and fourth-of-July orator.

He is the unquestioned authority of the community on everything from the scientific excavation of a post hole to the planting of potatoes in the moon.

He has memorized every joke of Ayers' almanac since its publication and knows the "foreign phrases" in the appendix of Webster's Unabridged "by heart."

He has a complete library consisting of the Bible, Shakespeare's Works, State Code, Rand-McNally's Atlas, Hills' Manual and the White House cook book. And if you should perchance be a candidate for teacher in the "deestrick" school, do not possess the conventional bald head, long under lip, red hair and glasses you are looked upon with suspicion, as an impostor on the pedagogic fraternity and must undergo a rigid "quizzing" by the "deestrick" clerk as a test of scholarship, ability to govern and aptness to teach.

After partaking of a bountiful repast of yellow-legged gump a la fricasee; pacted Java, extractus bovinus; H 200 lactal fluid; mashed murrhies; angels' food and deviled eggs; printer's disgrace, sunshine, liquid air, seldom seen; library paste and wireless telegraphy pudding—then treated to several hours discourse encompassing a period of American history and local family genealogy of my lordship, the "deestrick" clerk, from the time of "Honest Abe" up to the present age of dishonesty, and concludes the evening's lecture by a side-splitting joke from "Peck's Bad Boy" and you retire.

The next morning you meander to the "seat of war" and if you expect to find a school room with frescoed ceiling and upholstered furniture you will be sadly disappointed. The apparatus usually consists of a base-ball broom (nine straws on each side), a three-legged stove (lost a leg at the battle of Shiloh), a two-legged chair, an axe that some benevolent citizen of the "deestrick" presented to a former teacher that he had a grudge against and a water bucket unacquainted with the "Gold Dust Twing."

Guess I'll quit—that's a good thing to do, the assessor is liable to show up most any time, so it's "my move!" F. MILO LOBBELL.

Just a Little Scotch.

A tall, raw-boned immigrant got mixed up with a stream of Italians at Ellis Island, New York Harbor, and the efforts of the inspectors to learn his nationality created more than a little amusement.

As the Italians passed in line, the attendant would ask, "Itali-an?" putting the accent on the "an." Finally the big fellow came along. "Itali-an?" asked the official. The immigrant looked puzzled. "Greek?" asked the attendant. Still the big fellow answered not. "Sprechen sie Deutsch!" No reply. "Parlez vous Francaise?" A puzzled look was the only sign. "Habla Usted Espanol?" Nothing doing. "Irish?" Instantly a flush of pleased comprehension shot athwart the big fellows phiz. Then he replied in the commonest if not the most approved vernacular: "Naw, h—h! Scotch!"

John Coombs Has Steady Job.

John Coombs and Will Wurtzweiler, of Prineville, lined up on opposing sides of the fight over the republican nomination for county treasurer, and made a wager on the outcome of the contest, the payment of which wager is giving the winner considerable satisfaction in addition to the pleasure he extracts from the daily adornment of his pedal extremities.

The New Army Rifle.

A new magazine rifle will be issued to all of the infantry and cavalry troops in the United States before the end of May. The new bayonets have been manufactured, and the Ordnance Department now has on hand a large quantity of the new small arm, which will be immediately issued.
