DIRT IS NOW FLYING

Oregon Trunk Line Begins Grading.

ACTIVE AT MOUTH OF RIVER

Railroad is Now Building into Central Oregon up the Deschutes—Signs of Life in Corvallis & Eastern.

The statements recently made that the Oregon Trunk Line would soon begin construction of a road up the Deschutes river are now realized and Saturday W. F. Nelson, the promoter and president of this project, started a force of men at work grading near the mouth of the river. The survey is completed and rights of way secured for a distance of more than 100 miles into the interior of Oregon.

It is believed that there is a Hill relationship to these Oregon railroad projects and that some day they will become a part of the Hill system now building down the north bank of the Columbia. The present survey now ends at Madras, but it will be remembered that Engineer Gordon of the Oregon Trunk Line, while completing the survey to Madras last winter, said that the extension of the road south from Madras along the Deschutes river to Bend would be an easy matter. In view of the fact that this road is now building up the Deschutes, such a statement by a leading engineer of the road contains much promise for Bend's hopes for a railroad in the not distant future. The Trunk Line is said to be the first of various feeders with which J. J. Hill will invade Harriman's territory in Oregon.

Sunday's Portland Journal tells how this fight between Hill and Harriman is growing fiercer every day and how the contest is spreading from the north bank of the Columbia onto the Deschutes river. The Journal says:

The engagement involves more than 400 miles of main line between Wallula, Portland and the Sound, and several hundred miles of prospective branch lines. An intimation of its great scope is shown by what is now happening on the Deschutes river, where yesterday morning W. F. Nelson, president of the Oregon Trunk Line, a Hill road, began the construction of a line 100 miles long, from the mouth of the Deschutes to Madras. This project is to be fought with all the force the Harriman people can muster.

As soon as news of Nelson's move yesterday reached the Portland headquarters of the Harriman companies, preparations were begun to launch construction work on the Deschutes, where a Harriman surveying party has been hard at work running a line to Madras, and on into Central Oregon to meet the projected Harriman road through the state from Natron to the Snake river. Every foot of the Deschutes river route is to be contested with even more vigor than the fight is waged on the north bank of the Columbia.

Corvallis & Eastern Wakes Up.

J. K. Weatherford and G. W. Talbot, who passed through Bend last week, are men prominent in the Corvallis & Eastern road. They followed the C. & E. survey over the mountains into Bend and on into Eastern Oregon, and were evidently on a tour of inspection. In mentioning this trip the Albany Herald says:

Manager Guy W. Talbot came up yesterday noon and last evening, accompanied by Vice President J. K. Weatherford and Superintendent J. K. Walsh, left for the front for a couple of days' stay. Messrs. Talbot and Weatherford will go into the mountains along the road beyond Detroit to look over the company's property and the road between the terminus and Mill City will be carefully inspected, the new manager being anxious to familiarize himself with the property under his jurisdiction. They will go with packhorses beyond Detroit, and may go to the summit of the mountain. Mr. Talbot did not say so, but the indications are that his trip may mean the early resumption of work on the extension of the road into the Eastern Oregon country, an extension so earnestly desired by the people of this city.

R. P. Habersham of Astoria of the engineering department of the Astoria & Columbia River railroad and of the Corvallis & Eastern came up Tuesday and spent the afternoon in the general offices of the company here. His visit here, taken in connection with the trip through the Cascade mountains along the projected extension now being taken by Manager Guy W. Talbot and Vice President J. K. Weatherford lends some color to the impression that something may be under way toward the extension of the C. & E. railroad at an early date.

ANOTHER RESIDENCE BURNS.

House and Entire Contents on the Dr. Merrill Ranch Destroyed.

Early Thursday morning, the residence of Dr. Merrill was completely destroyed by fire on his ranch one mile south of town. Practically the entire contents were burned, the only things that were saved from the flames being a sewing machine, a trunk, a few articles of clothing, and odds and ends that did not amount to much. The fire is supposed to have caught from a defective stovepipe.

Evidences of the fire were first seen by H. W. Morrill, who was working on the west side of the river opposite the house. He hurried across the bridge and by the time he reached the house flames were bursting forth from the front of it. The doctor at the time was working in the barn and Mrs. Merrill was busy with the duties of breakfast. There was scarcely more than time enough to get out the two little boys who were still asleep.

Dr. Merrill will rebuild at once. He carried $1,000 insurance on the house and contents.

WILL HEAR SWEET MUSIC.

Reorganization of Bend's Band is Now Completed.

Last Monday evening a few of the old members of Bend's former band, together with several initiates met at the Triplett barber shop and perfected an organization. C. M. Weymouth was chosen president of the new organization, H. J. P. McDonald business manager, and Charles D. Brown secretary and treasurer. In a few weeks Bend's citizens will be treated once more to the strains of martial music furnished by their own local band.

Considerable correspondence has been had with Warren Glaze at Prineville, who directed the band last year. It is hoped and expected that arrangements will be completed whereby he will instruct the present organization.

The band is composed of the following members: Creed Triplett, Charles D. Brown, Frank Hodson, Prince Staats, Carlyle Triplett, C. M. Weymouth, O. S. Crocker, H. J. P. McDonald, Floyd Lobdell, Elmer Merrill, T. W. Zimmermann and Barney Lewis, "Barney," who is now with the Oregon Eastern surveyors, will return to Bend about July 4.

Catholic Church Items.

Rev. Father Hickey writes us to say that he will shortly make his summer visitation of his large district. He will be in Bend for Sunday, July 8, where he will lecture, teach catechism and hold examination of Miss Robison's Sunday school class. He will visit any sick, celebrate Holy Mass and preach, and discharge all the functions of his sacred ministry. All the Catholics of the county can come and make their Easter Duty at Bend or at Prineville. The Reverend Father desires all Catholics who live scattered throughout the country surrounding Bend, Madras and Prineville to write him at Wasco, Or., and tell him about themselves and family and he will arrange to attend them and see to the religious instruction of their children. The priest will also celebrate Mass at Marrow & Keenan's and at Prineville. Write the priest for fuller instructions.

CAPITALISTS IN BEND

Came to Investigate Deschutes Valley.

PLAN AN IRRIGATING PROJECT

These Men Will Undertake to Water the Fertile Madras Country from the Deschutes River.

Donald Fitzgerald, H. M. Griffin and Frank Robertson, capitalists of New York, accompanied by Don P. Rea of Madras, were in Bend Sunday, conferring with local men in regard to matters relative to the irrigation project which these men are about to launch in the Madras country.

Mr. Fitzgerald, who seems to be the moving spirit behind this project, was inclined to ridicule the glowing story descriptive of this undertaking that recently appeared in Oregon papers. While it is true that some surveys have been made, and while there is no doubt that this company will eventually conduct water onto the Agency Plains and Haystack country, the story of an immense dam in the Deschutes river and a steel trestle supporting a conduit through which the water will flow 898 feet above the bed of Crooked river to irrigate 100,000 acres and the whole project costing $1,000,000, is rather premature, according to Mr. Fitzgerald.

The visit of these New York capitalists to the scene of the proposed project was to familiarize themselves more thoroughly with conditions governing a project of this nature and thus be able to determine what proportions the undertaking will assume. While these gentlemen are sincere in their intention to launch an extensive irrigation project, they gave Bend people to understand that it is only in its preliminary stages.

Mr. Fitzgerald was so favorably impressed with Bend, its ideal location and lovely mountain view, that he expressed a strong desire to purchase a large block of town property with a river frontage and erect a handsome residence.

The party returned to Madras Monday morning.

LUMBERMEN VISIT BEND.

Members of the Brooks-Scanlon Company Look Over Holdings Here.

Last Friday evening M. J. Scanlon and son R. H., J. P. Keyes and S. A. Blakeley, all of Minnesota, arrived in Bend and spent several days cruising over a large tract of timber held by the Brooks-Scanlon people of Minneapolis. Later the party, with the exception of Mr. Blakeley, departed for Southern Oregon points.

Mr. Scanlon, who has held a large tract of timber south and east of Bend for several years, told Bend parties while here that he was anxious that a railroad be built into this country in order that he might build a mill and begin to saw his timber. It is known that he holds an option on either one of two desirable mill sites on the river at Bend. Mr. Scanlon, at various times, has told Bend people that when transportation facilities warranted such an enterprise, his company would build a large mill at this place.

Mr. Blakeley and "Bill" Brock are now cruising for this company in the vicinity of Bend.

Speaking of a large deal recently closed by the Brooks-Scanlon people, the Timberman says:

The Brooks-Scanlon Lumber Company of Minneapolis, which bought a heavy tract of yellow pine in Louisiana last year, has made another big investment in Florida. The purchase includes 111,000 acres of yellow pine land near Orlando. No mill is included and the deal is understood to have amounted to about $1,000,000. It will be developed soon, and the product will be shipped by coast steamers to New York and New England points.

Ice cream sodas can now be obtained at the postoffice store. 14-1f
