Problems That Confront The Irrigator.

How to Control the Waste of Water.

Recent investigations made by the office of experiment stations have shown that the quantity of water which plants use varies...

Loss from Faulty Preparation of Surface.

One of the most common sources of loss of water is poor preparation of the surface. When the soil is irrigated by flooding...

Loss from Troughs.

Another common cause of waste is the lack of attention. Water is often turned on a portion of a field and permitted to run without attention...

Inefficient Irrigation.

The shallow and too frequent irrigation is another source of waste. Working the surface and neglecting to maintain a sufficient depth...

Quality of Cultivation.

Again, in farming by irrigation thorough and frequent cultivation is of first importance.

Why Irrigation is Practiced.

The main purpose of irrigation is to furnish the requisite amount of moisture to cropped soil.

A BETTER FAIR.

Plans Are Being Made for a Great Exhibit at Prineville Next Summer.

Speaking of the recent meeting of stockholders of the Central Oregon Livestock & Agricultural Association...

water. The irrigator need only concern himself with the farmer, which is correct as the free water in the soil...

Percentage of Soil Moisture.

Farmers in irrigated districts are fond of determining the proper percentage of soil moisture. All that is necessary is a soil auger and a balance scale to weigh the sample.

Quantity of Moisture Required to Give Best Results.

The data given above were taken in a field in the beginning of irrigation during the first season. After that it should be found by finding the percentage of the moisture which will give the best results.

Moisture Not the Only Essential.

In attempting to find out how much free moisture cropped soils should contain, it is well to bear in mind the fact that while moisture is the principal element in growing crops...

Water is Being Made to Place the Association in the regular state circuit...

The new parkland that was built last year will be finished in capacity this year. The grand stand will be moved and otherwise improved.
