of the Deschutes Irrigation & Power Company. The former project was on the west side of the Deschutes river and obtains its water by irrigation from Tamello creek, and comprises only 27,000 acres; while the Deschutes Irrigation & Power Company's segregation, with headquarters at Bend, lies to the east of the Deschutes river, diverts its water from that stream, and embraces 250,000 acres. The latter company is working in perfect harmony with the State Land Board.
