TO SEND MERCHANTS,

If you have examined the catalogues of the big mail order concerns you will have been impressed, perhaps, with the studied efforts these merchants make to convince people that they can save money by dealing with them—save something on almost any article under the sun.

The appeal succeeds, as you know; and these merchants win largely because of the emphasis they place on this one idea all of the time, in all of their advertising.

Now you know that on a great many things you can undersell these same mail order people; and so it seems as though one way to compete with them would be to enlarge upon the fact that you can undersell even the mail order houses on same qualities of goods.

And, in your advertising, it might be wise to learn one other thing from these people. They take plenty of space in which to describe (usually in very crude literary style, but still with a certain amount of conviction) the merits and attractions of their goods—specific, detailed descriptions.

You can make your ads. twice as interesting as any mail order catalogue, twice as readable—but you should, perhaps, keep in mind the two things that, in mail order advertising, sell goods. Claims of money-saving—and detailed descriptions of articles—and always iteration and reiteration of the idea that their prices are lower.

Incidentally, the mail order merchant will not cut into the trade of any merchant who advertises aggressively and adequately in his local paper.

That man Hughes of New York is certainly causing the politicians of his state a great deal of trouble. They are afraid that if they do not nominate him for re-election the ticket will be defeated; and if they do nominate him they fear they will likewise suffer defeat. They are truly between the devil and the deep sea. Hughes has made good. And he has done it, as usual, in spite of the bitter opposition of the political machine. What a refreshing sight it has been, a stalwart man standing for right laws and decent living, and carrying on his fight in open defiance of the whole scurvy tribe of politicians. Walter Wellman, writing to the Chicago Record-Herald, says: "He defies the whole tribe of politicians—those of his own party as well as of the other party." Good for Hughes. Would that the nation had more men of like caliber.

Does it pay to be decent? Judging from the actions of some men, we must infer that they figure it does not. Apparently their every endeavor is to amass wealth, not in some legitimate manner, but by violation of the law. And this violation consists in acts of immorality, nastiness and filth. That's the manner in which they make their living—by degrading the morals of the community and importing lewd women to assist them. The very presence of such men is a contamination. They are wholly criminal and a menace to decent society. They should be put where their nefarious impulses can injure no one—behind the bars of a penitentiary.

Campers Kill Eight Deer.

W. H. Ramsey, J. E. Campbell and J. J. Waits and their families returned Tuesday from a two weeks' outing in the Cascades. They camped near the big berry patch on the Santiam and during their stay there killed eight deer. Berries were very scarce, and only a few have ripened so far as the season is late, but big game is unusually plentiful in the mountains.—Madras Pioneer.

FACES CHARGE OF ARSON.

buildings adjoining the cellar from catching.

Millard Triplett stated on the stand that on the night of the jail fire, Estebenet stood by his side when somebody told Estebenet that his cellar was again on fire. The defendant remarked, "The dickens it is," and walked around on the other side of Triplett. He showed no alarm and waited so long before going to the cellar that Triplett was surprised, thinking that if a man's property was burning he would be anxious to attend to it. He also testified that he had asked the defendant if he had got a lot of his whisky moved out before the fires, whereupon Estebenet got greatly excited and offered to bet Triplett a hundred dollars that he had not moved the whisky. He had previously admitted to Sheriff Elkins that he had moved the goods.

Bob Flemming testified that previous to the first fire in the cellar, Estebenet had told him that he was going to have the liquor insured as there might be a fire.

The defense introduced no evidence, but confined itself to argument before the court.

The history of this case is interesting. On the night of the Luster mill fire, Saturday, July 18, the barrel in the Estebenet cellar burned and went out without spreading to the adjoining wood-work. On Tuesday night, the 21st, the cellar was found afire and considerable damage done to the wet goods stored in it, but the cellar was not totally destroyed. Again, on Friday night, July 24, at the time the jail was afire, the cellar was again discovered to be on fire. Those who first reached the cellar on the 21st found the door covering the approach to the cellar propped open with a stick and the door opening into the cellar unlocked and slightly open, as though to give the fire air. That is the suspicion now held. After this fire the keys to the cellar were taken by Chas. Brown, who had written the insurance policy, and the door locked. The last fire was set against the upright door and within the approach to the cellar.

On July 18 Estebenet was notified that his application for insurance had been accepted. On that evening the barrel burned in the cellar. This, with the moving of the liquor, the three fires in the cellar following each other so closely, and Estebenet's general conduct under examination, aroused the suspicion that he was responsible for the fires. The extreme penalty for arson is 15 years in the penitentiary; the least is four years.

When a change of venue was granted Estebenet in the case brought against him of having sold liquor illegally, Sheriff Elkins and Attorney Bernier dismissed the case, as they would not have time to try it, and he was at once arrested on the charge of arson. There are still several counts standing against him for the illegal selling of liquor. He will have to stand trial for these later.

Bail Reduced to $1200.

On Thursday at Prineville arguments were made before County Judge Ellis in habeas corpus proceedings brought in behalf of A. B. Estebenet. Attorneys Barnes and Greenman appeared for Estebenet and Bernier for the State. The release of Estebenet was denied by Judge Ellis after the arguments had been submitted, but by common consent of the attorneys of both sides the bail was reduced from $2500 to $1200. This amount was soon raised and the defendant is now out on bail.

Cured Hay Fever and Summer Cold
 A. S. Nusbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed only to aggravate it. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." C. W. Merrill, Druggist.

Merrill-Wilkinson.

Promptly at 8 o'clock Thursday evening Miss Bessie Wilkinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira J. Wilkinson, was united in marriage to Mr. Elmer Merrill, the ceremony being solemnized by Rev. J. Anthony Mitchell at the home of the bride's parents east of Bend.

At the appointed time the young couple entered the room to the strains of the wedding march rendered by the bride's sister, Mrs. Creed Triplett. They took their positions beneath a horse shoe of carnations and before a corner massed with manzanita. Rev. Mitchell then spoke the few and simple words that united the lives of these two young people. The bride was attired in a gown of white batiste trimmed with lace over white silk, while the groom wore the conventional black.

Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served. The table was prettily decorated with a centerpiece of candles banked with carnations. From the four corners of the table hop vines and ribbons ascended to the ceiling making a very pretty effect. The house throughout was decorated with manzanita and carnations.

The wedding was a quiet one, only a very few friends being present outside of the immediate families of the contracting parties. Numerous handsome presents of China and silver were received.

Mr. and Mrs. Merrill left the same evening for the groom's home-stead west of Rosland, where they will be at home to their friends after October 1.

The bride is a talented young lady and is popularly and well known in Bend's social circles, having resided here some four or five years. The groom is an energetic young farmer, likewise well known in Bend and vicinity. The Bulletin extends best wishes.
