Medicines containing Mercury are often given to persons suffering with Contagious Blood Poison, and so powerful is the action of this drag that it frequently removes the symptoms in a short while, and shuts the disease up in the system to do greater damage to the delicate internal members. When, however, the treatment is left off, the disease always returns, and the patient finds that his health has been injured by this powerful mineral, and he is often left with weak stomach, disturbed digestion, mercurial rheumatism, etc. The action of S. S. S. is entirely different. It contains no Mercury, nor any other harmful drug, but is made entirely of healing, cleansing roots and herbs. It cures Contagious Blood Poison by removing the virus from the blood. It searches out every particle of the poison and does not leave the least trace for future outbreaks. S. S. S. in addition to curing the disease, builds up and strengthens every part of the body. Its fine tonic effects tone up the stomach and digestion, improve the appetite and regulate the entire system. Agriculture, has the following to say about hale, which is timely:
"Methods of Sowing—For fall and winter use hale is usually sown in drills on well prepared and drained soil as soon after the 15th of March as the season will permit. This furnishes plants for transplanting in June and July. The land used for transplanting is well manured and plowed two or three times between plowed two or three times between the first of March and the first of June. With the land in perfect tilth it is plowed again with a 12-inch plow about the first of June, and the young kale plants dropped into every third furrow about two and a half to three feet apart. This places about one plant on every square yard. The roots of the plants are placed where the next furrow covers them, leaving the tops uncovered. The plants that are plowed in during the day in this way are rolled in the evering of the same day to pack the ground. Two or three cultivations are all that can usually be given, for the plants will soon touch in the row, if they do well. Any plants that fail to grow may be replaced by hand. Some growers prefer to plant the seed in hills, and when the plants are large enough thin them to one plant in a hill. Others put ka'e out just as cabbase is usually transplanted, instead of plowing it in plowed in during the day in this way put kee out just and of plowing it in transplanted instead of plowing it in The time of transplanting must be The time of transplanting must be determined by the size of the plants and the condition of the land. If the land is wet and subject to overflow the transplanting may be delayed un-til during July. If the land is well an shoppers coming down the fire estil during July. If the land is well drained and the plants are large enough it may be done before the first. You see, they can't get through the revolving doors with those big on the land where the seedlings are

I am of the opinion that you will find it too great an expense, considering the value of a team and a man, to haul this water during the summer. The station would advise you to try and onserve this moisture by means of culture. This could be done with good effect during the summer months. I have had considerable experience on the state college campus in hauling water; and have concluded, first that it is impracticable to place water around the tree without a heavy mulch of straw; second, that nothing much less than a barrel of water for each tree at each watering, should be given. This will soak the ground up fairly well, and in our case, I did not need to water the trees on the campus more than twice during the summer. not know that it will be possible you to make use of a heavy mulch, but in order to hold the water, it is necessary to do so. You can use rotted straw for this, or forest leaves."-From the Washington State college,
