Chas. D. Brown met with a painful accident Sunday, while on the way to Prineville. About a mile this side of the Powell Buttes station, a newspaper blew under the horses. One of them shied, and a tug came down, letting the singletree fly back into the wheel, the noise from which finally frightened the team so that they became unmanagable and ran away, throwing Mr. Brown out and dislocating the bones of his instep. The team left the buggy on a bridge nearby, ran through two or three wire fences and were quite badly cut, ending up at the station. People at the station went out and found Mr. Brown. Dr. Coe was called from Bend, and went out and attended to the injured foot. Later Mr. Brown was brought to his home in Bend. He will be laid up for about two months.

A Religious Author's Statement.

For several years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and last winter I was suddenly stricken with severe pain in my kidneys and was confined to bed eight days unable to get up without assistance. My urine contained a thick white sediment and I passed same frequently day and night. I commenced taking Foley's Kidney Remedy, and the pain gradually abated and finally ceased and my urine became normal. I cheerfully recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy.—C. W. Merrill, druggist.

CASSEROLE COOKING.

The Little Fireproof Dishes a Joy to the Housekeeper.

The casserole convert is worse than the automobile enthusiast. After one has fully learned the joy which cooking in these little fireproof dishes brings there is no returning to the old and once esteemed saucepans and skillets. Casseroles have the advantage of being cheap to buy and of saving time and work once they are in use. If the dish is large enough, one can cook almost an entire meal at one time, vegetables going in with the meat and receiving thereby a delicious flavor quite apart from that of the usual method of cooking. The plain dishes without metal or fancy trimmings are by far the most satisfactory. They come in every size and shape, so that one can cook in them everything from a pot roast to an egg. The roast is put in the dish with just enough water to keep it from sticking when it begins to cook, the cover placed on and the whole set inside the oven. As the meat cooks the juice flows out and should be used to baste the roast from time to time, thereby keeping it tender and juicy also. Onions, carrots, potatoes, beans, parsnips and turnips can be put in to cook with the meat for half an hour before taking out of the oven. They can be cut in pieces or left whole, as preferred.

One can use almost any leftover bits of meat, fowl or fish with a casserole at hand.

Some of these dishes come in a quaint, rich olive green, with covers to match. They usually have a slender handle on one side or two handles—one on each side. Again they come in a red brown earthenware, which is fireproof, and again in a light yellow, also fireproof. In the foreign households of this country they are of a brownish red pottery, glazed on the inside and rough and "scratchy" outside. They have a long, round handle and curved edges and can be bought with or without covers. These are very cheap. The casserole can be brought to the table straight from the oven and is not unsightly. It therefore saves the labor of so much washing of extra dishes and cooking utensils. It is a rule only in foreign cookbooks—French and Italian—that one finds recipes for casserole dishes.

ARTISTIC SOFA PILLOW.

The Embroider Is Reviving Tapestry Work This Winter.

Women who embroider have gone back to working in wool again. The newest thing is the gobelin tapestry work. The pillow shown in the accompanying illustration was imported from

WORKED IN GOBELIN TAPESTRY STITCH.

Paris, where gobelin tapestry work is being revived and suited to popular use.

The work is done for the most part on art burlaps, and the material used is four ply zephyr, a heavyweight zephyr which fills in rapidly. The tapestry stitch is simple, very much like the long and short stitch. In fact, the leaves and fruit on the conventionalized tree pattern of the pillow shown here are shaded, and the effect produced is much like that of tapestry. An outline stitch in black is used to bring out the pattern with excellent effect.

The bright warm colors of the soft wools make this delightfully attractive work for winter evenings.

When It Is Economy.

It is economy for the housewife to refuse to order her market supplies by phone.

The wise matron will rise early and get the choicest things from market, beautifully fresh.

It is not economy to purchase fruits or vegetables out of season, since anything of forced growth cannot give the sustenance we require.

It is economy to arise a little earlier some morning in order to tell the baker you will not need so many loaves of bread for a couple of weeks because part of your family has gone away.

It is economy not to leave the soap in a basin of water after washing; also to put little scraps in a bag to be used for the bath or dishwashing, according to the quality of the soap.

It is economy when caught in a rainstorm, especially if in your best clothes, to spend 50 cents or even $1 for carriage hire rather than run the risk of having the clothes spoiled.

To admit all the sunshine and fresh air possible is economy, for they will bring health and save many doctors' bills, even if the sun fades the rugs.

To rest by the wayside and stay here on earth with your dear ones awhile longer rather than striving to do everything and falling under the yoke is economy.

To Freshen Fur.

To freshen fur which has got rubbed and crushed from being packed away brush with a fairly stiff clothesbrush which has been dipped in cold water and shake dry. Brush the fur the wrong way and then hang in the air and beat now and then with a stick. Combing carefully done, so as not to pull out too much of the hair, will also restore softness and beauty.

HARDANGER WORK.

Table Center In Cream Color on Congress Canvas.

HOW TO MAKE THE STITCHES

The Edging Is Done In Ordinary Buttonholing, With Which Every Woman Is Familiar—The Little Border Is Merely a Satin Stitch.

The illustration shows a table center in the popular hardanger embroidery. The design is a pretty one, and the fact that it comes direct from Norway, the home of this lacelike work, adds much to its attraction.

This table center was worked in cream color on fine congress canvas, but any shades the worker fancies may be suitably employed.

Embroidery thread (size A) is used for the outlining stitches, while the weave stitches and lace fillings are worked with crochet cotton No. 16.

A pair of very sharp embroidery scissors is necessary for cutting the canvas, and the best needle for this work is a blunt pointed canvas one of rather small size.

The sampler, showing the various stitches on a greatly enlarged scale, together with the following description of each of them, should enable any one to accomplish a similar piece of work without any difficulty.

Fig. 1 shows how the satin stitch which is used for outlining the diamonds, etc., is worked. It is done over four threads, and five stitches form a group. These groups are worked first along and then down, so as to form a zigzag slanting line. This stitch should be worked from right to left.

Fig. 2.—Method of cutting and drawing the threads and working the simple weave or darning stitch.

The needle is passed over two threads and then under the same, and it is brought up in the middle ready to begin the same stitch over the two threads of canvas on the opposite side.

Fig. 3 illustrates the method of working the little ornamental picots. The bar is worked halfway with ordinary weave stitch; then the needle is passed under the working thread and the last darning stitch and taken through the loop thus formed. When pulled up fairly tight, a neat picot is the result.

ner: Three sides of the square are completed in weave stitch, and when halfway through with the fourth side the needle is passed through the middle of each of the finished bars in turn and then under the last working thread of the fourth side, which is then completed like the others in weave stitch.

The edging of the work is done in ordinary buttonhole stitch familiar to every one.
