"THE BIG STORE ON THE CORNER"
BEND, OREGON

Notice to Bulletin Readers.

Up to early Wednesday morning there had been no trains into Shanks for three days. This delayed the shipment of our papers from Portland so late that it is necessary for The Bulletin to appear only half size this week. We hope there will not be many such occurrences.

J. McCoy of Redmond was a Bend visitor Monday and Tuesday.

Hereafter the reading room will be open Wednesday afternoons instead of Tuesday.

U. A. Wynn, right of way man for the Central Oregon railroad, has returned to Madras and again begun negotiating for right of way.

The Bulletin is now pleasantly located in its new quarters in the O'Kane building first door west of the Hotel Bend. We are ready for business not at the old stand but at the new stand. Bring in your job printing and get better work than ever.

J. D. Davidson is over from Prineville this week. At the council meeting Tuesday night he qualified as Bend's chief executive, and now it is Mayor Davidson, T. W. Triplett, J. H. Kelley and S. C. Caldwell were also "sworn in" as aldermen.

The magnificent fur rug that has been on exhibition at "The Big Store on the Corner" for the past two weeks is to be raffled off. The rug is seven feet six inches by eight feet two inches and is lined throughout. The tickets are from 1 cent to 125 cents. Some one is going to get this rug for very little money. Are you the lucky one?

Frank West reports a peculiar find while digging a cellar at his homestead some time ago. When down about three feet he found a lot of charred embers, a fire evidently having been there at some time. Among these embers he found three sulphur matches that had been burned but a very short distance from the fire end, the matches being in a good state of preservation. From the appearance of the surface ground over the cellar there was nothing to indicate in the slightest any excavating or digging by which the remains of a fire might have been covered up. The question is how did the burned embers and the three matches get buried beneath three feet of earth? You tell.

Bill Howell received quite a serious wound by being kicked in the head by a horse last Thursday night. During the day he had been riding after cattle and about 6 o'clock rode up to the stage station stable at Powell Buttes, intending to put up his horse and spend the night at the station. There was no one at the stable and the barn was very dark. Bill's shaps were somewhat frozen and as he stooped over to pull them over his heel, something struck him in the forehead and he knew no more. It was so dark that Howell did not know he was anywhere near a horse, but it turned out that he was and the animal had kicked him. About 8 o'clock E. A. Busset happened to pass the barn and hearing a noise that led him to believe perhaps a horse was down, he went into the stable to investigate. He found Bill lying senseless between the legs of a horse, with the animal's legs covered with blood which had spurted from the wound. As Busset pulled Bill from his dangerous position, he came to, got up and walked into the house. People there asked him if he did not want a doctor called, but he replied that he did not and went off to bed. The next morning he remembered nothing of the previous night's experience and it seems he had been dazed during the entire evening. Dr. Coe was then called and the wound dressed, it being necessary to take several stitches. Fortunately the skull was not injured and Bill is getting along all right.

The Bulletin missed one of the social events of last week, namely a birthday party for Master Ronald Sellers on Monday of last week, the event being in honor of Ronald's fifth birthday. There were nine little men present and Ronald had personally invited little Marion Sather, so there were ten present besides the host. There was a great big birthday cake with the five candles, and of course the little folks had a most delightful afternoon.

There will be a masquerade ball on the night of February 12, the proceeds of which will go for the benefit of the library. There will be prizes given for the best sustained character by lady or gentleman, for the best sustained character by boy or girl, and also for the most comical character. Gentlemen will be required to pay $1.00, which will include a ticket for one lady. Lady spectators and those unaccompanied by an escort will be required to pay 25 cents.

Mr. Spoo, the gentleman from the Valley who is to start a saw-mill west of Laidlaw, reports that the Corvallis & Eastern is shipping great quantities of ties and storing them at Detroit, the eastern terminus of that road. Just before leaving Lebanon, his old home, he saw several carloads of ties destined for Detroit. He believes this is a sure indication that the C. & E. will be extended through this section, for why would the railroad ship such quantities of ties there if they were not to be used in extending the road.

Frank West and wife have been spending the week in town with relatives. They were on their way to Prineville for a visit with Mrs. Poindexter, but were caught in Bend by the heavy snow and thought they would wait over here until the roads were well broken through.

Ralph Patterson reports that there are thousands of ducks on the river in the vicinity of the Frank West ranch. This is accounted for by the fact that the lakes and the river above that point have frozen over to such an extent that the ducks can not feed on the moss, which is their natural food at this time of year, and they
