MR. REDFIELD AS RECEIVER.
 Judge Bean made a good appointment when he named Chief Engineer Redfield to be receiver of the D. I. & P. Co. Receiverships at best are expensive and more or less unsatisfactory agencies for carrying on business affairs, but it is certainly better to have in such office a man who has a practical knowledge of the field and the particular business to be adjusted than one whose chief object in life is a soft snap. Large interests are too often sacrificed to improper receiverships—incompetent men and exorbitant pay. This, we are convinced, will not be the record in the Deschutes case. Mr. Redfield has been in charge of the irrigation work here through the several managements of the D. I. & P. Co. and has a more intimate knowledge of it than any other man. He knows the needs and desires of the settlers and the reclamation enterprise. This information gives him a vast advantage over any outsider in administering such a trust as is now confided to him.

The Bulletin is not concerned with the personal elements in the contention that has brought the D. I. & P. Co. to its present unhappy condition. It may say, however, that it has no patience with the campaign of harassing litigation that has kept things more or less ragged and haggard during the past three or four years. Nor does the Bulletin think there would have been any litigation involving the D. I. & P. Co. if the Oregon state land board had performed its supervisory duty with honesty and efficiency. Upon that board, charged with protection of the public interest, must rest the responsibility of utter disregard of the public interest. More may be said upon this point later.

For the present we are concerned as to an adjustment of D. I. & P. affairs that shall not impair or retard development in the Deschutes country. The case is three cornered. Before this reclamation project can be set on its feet there must be settlement with the Ohio bondholders, with the holders of the Stanley collateral bonds, and with the Howard syndicate. With the Howard contract out of the way, it is believed the other difficulties would soon disappear. But the enormous profits of that contract are worth fighting for, and doubtless will be fought for. That is the real peril of the situation. To an outsider it would seem that the Howard contract is so tainted with fraud as to deprive it of any standing in equity, though in law it might be enforceable. Some of the officers of the D. I. & P. Co. being members of the Howard syndicate and interested in defending its contract, the irrigation company will do nothing to assist in getting rid of that parasite. So there you are.

We claim no credit for suggesting a course that seems plain as a pikestaff, namely, eliminate the Howard contract and thus remove the real stumbling block. We are of the opinion that reasonable terms can be made, for it is pretty clear that nothing is to be gained by contention for the unreasonable. And there ought to be no disposition to exact unnecessary and unreasonable sacrifice from any of the factions or parties. If those who have real money in this project will consent to a fair adjustment—such, for example, as a board of arbitration might reach—and the stage money, wind and water be left out of consideration, we confidently believe the present embarrassment will be very shortlived.

The Bulletin is receiving from outsiders many protests against the misrepresentation of the "Hillman" promoters. There is no doubt, of course, of the intent of those fakery to mislead the public. But there is no protection for those who will pay their money without investigation. It must be remembered that "the fool and his money soon part." Those who will throw away their money on the mere word of a glib-tongued shyster are hardly entitled to sympathy from careful, prudent people. "Hillman" is a bald swindle. The newspapers ought to be in better business than assisting such transparent schemes for de-luding the unwary.

If you don't think Oregon is well provided with educational institutions try digesting The Bulletin's mail for a week—and you'll be laid up for a month. Not only have we a goodly, if not an ungodly, supply of alleged knowledge emporiums, but each and every one of them seems intent upon screaming its wants and virtues from the house-tops, their frantic attempt being to accomplish this through the medium of the press of the state. The press agents and boosters of the normal schools and multitudinous universities, all with axes to be ground, are deluging the papers of the state with their literature. Ap-publicity agents their efforts pale to insignificance the feeble attempts of a Portland commercial club. And come to think of it, it's about time for another pupil-raising and money-raising delegation to descend upon us from the valley of the Willamette.

Laugh and the world laughs with you, Weep, and you weep alone. Assuredly. Yet especially must this philosophic axiom hold true in Laidlaw. For, adorning the top of the editorial column of the sheet there given to a waiting world, even as a tombstone guards a grave, is a perennial notice proclaiming: "Cards of thanks, $1.00; resolutions of condolence, $2.00." And who, indeed, would pay that dollar difference simply to condole?

The woman's suffrage movement has at least one good act to its credit, namely, the launching of the delectably descriptive title, "husbanette."

The only knocker left in the Bend country is Dame Opportunity. She is knocking on everyone's door.

"U-Auto-C Laidlaw," is the slogan to be screamed from the housetop of our neighboring town. Indeed you "auter."

If the state goes dry what will become of the Columbia River bar? And what, then, of the periodic Oregonian editorials thereupon?

Receiverships seem to be the latest fashion for irrigation companies.

Notice.
 In plating our townsite additions east of Bend we have found a number of carcasses of horses left on our property immediately adjoining the Pilot Butte canal. This is both a trespass and a menace to public health, as the land drains directly from the decomposed bodies into the ditch. All persons are hereby warned against continuing this practice, under penalty of prosecution.

SCHOOL CLOSED.

On Account of Diphtheria, Building Fumigated and Precautions Taken.

This morning the Bend schools were closed temporarily on account of the case of diphtheria which yesterday resulted in the death of Marie Ray. Today a thorough fumigation of the school house is in progress, and it is understood that work will be resumed either the last of this week or next Monday.

While the sick child was isolated for several days before the nature of the case was pronounced and a strict quarantine kept on the premises and those exposed as soon as the diagnosis was made, the school authorities are taking these extra precautions to do away with every possible further risk.
