Will exchange young orchard near Medford for business lots in Bend, Redmond or Madras; or will consider trade for alfalfa land near these towns.

Thus reads an advertisement appearing elsewhere in this paper. Interesting, isn't it? An orchard owner in the far famed Medford country desiring to exchange his property there for town lots here in Bend, the "high priced" or for acreage in the territory "that can't raise anything." Another straw, this, indicating the way the wind blows—the wind of immigration, which is focussing upon the Deschutes Valley as upon no other section in the entire West.

Why does business halt for a national election? For weeks an approaching election is given as the reason for not branching out in business. No matter which way the election goes, things pick up afterward almost invariably. It is one of the habits of the business world and is growing more and more pronounced.

A Crook county sawmill man a few days ago wired an order for six yards of block friction paper. In the telephone transmission the order reached its destination as "black fraction" paper. The concern took the order to the U. S. Land Office for interpretation and then sent out six yards of tracing paper.

Snow that fell on the 8th of November last year remained until March, in patches and shady places. This year the first flurry of snow came on the morning of the same date, but it lasted only an hour or two and was followed by bright and balmy weather—except for defeated candidates.

During the last decade Missouri's population has increased but 186,670. This not because the Missourians disregard Roosevelt's golden rule of multiplication but because that inherent curiosity expressed in the historic "Show me" has led Missouri's sons and daughters into new lands.

Only one town on the line of railroad development in Central Oregon has municipal water service, electric lights and a steam laundry. The Bend Commercial Club will be glad to inform you what town this is, if you do live here you won't need to ask.

COYOTES ARE BENEFIT

Tumalo Correspondent Calls Attention to Their Valuable Traits.

TUMALO, Or., Nov. 8th.—The fact that Crook county is paying a bounty for coyote scalps seems to many experienced farmers herabouts as a bad thing. Of course the coyotes kill a few chickens and perhaps a sheep or two and do a little damage generally. However, there is another important side to the question. The coyotes keep down the rabbits, squirrels and field mice. Rabbits can do far more harm to the farmers than many coyotes. Many countries are practically overrun with them, and crops damaged very heavily. Crook county is making a mistake. It's bad policy. Coyotes do more good than harm.

J. W. Baker and family left this place for Roseburg via the McKenzie Road yesterday.

The Wimer haybaler is now baling hay for Fred Wallace on the Simmons Ranch. We understand that Mr. Wallace has contracted this hay to Bend parties at a good price.

Mr. Foster will finish threshing grain this week and will then move to Powell Butte.

School Notes.

Mark Thompson, Elsie Horn and Leslie Lindborg have entered school during the past week.

A new library table was put in Miss Young's room.

Beatie and Marion Smith have been absent on account of illness.

Outline for fair work for the primary grades has been completed by the Misses Richardson, Anderson and Haskins and will probably be published some time during the next month.

Emily Schreder took charge of the First grade last Thursday morning during Miss Richardson's absence.

OLD ENGLISH BOXERS.

Hired to Prevent Trouble at George IV's Coronation.

Boxing was introduced into England in the earlier part of the eighteenth century, its first practitioner being John Broughton, who kept a booth for exhibitions in Tottenham Court road, London, and rules were drawn up Aug. 10, 1743. The rogue was due to the decline of sword combat exhibitions in the reign of George I. Broughton himself was the first who stood in the position of champion, a distinction which he held for eighteen years, but eventually he was knocked out by a butcher named Slack. Broughton was a great pet of the Duke of Cumberland, who took the pugilist with him to Berlin, when he declared himself ready to take on the entire regiment of grenadier guards there "if he were only allowed a breakfast between each two battles."

The English fighter Tom Cribb once secured a very remarkable engagement. Just before the coronation of George IV, certain sympathizers with Queen Caroline bragged that on the day of the ceremonial they would make matters warm in the neighborhood of Westminster abbey, and this reached the ears of the earl marshal. That high functionary sought an interview with the pugilist "Gentleman" Jackson, who taught Lord Byron to box.

Jackson got together some two dozen bruisers. Besides Cribb, the band included John Gully, in turn fighting man, racing man, colliery proprietor and member of parliament. They were attired as king's pages and gathered about the abbey-doors. There was no trouble.—Chicago News.

REINDEER IN LAPLAND.

They Furnish the People With Shelter, Clothing and Food.

Some people have said that the reindeer of the northern regions is to the inhabitants of those countries what the horse, cow and sheep together are to the dwellers in southern lands, and very probably they are right. What would the Laplander be were he deprived of his favorite? How could he travel without his pair of reindeer harnessed to his sledge?

The reindeer has large black hoofs, behind which are false or secondary hoofs; the result is that when running they make a clattering sound, which may be heard a good distance away. The reindeer has much endurance and takes a long journey without seeming tired, though it is only about four and a half feet in height and not very strong. Its horns are long and slender, with branched, rounded antlers, but they are not much used in combat, like those of some other deer.

The largest reindeer are found where the weather is coldest, and their color is lighter. Usually it is brown and white, but in the case of old animals the hair is sometimes quite white. From the skin of the reindeer the Laplanders get not only their clothes, but also bedding and tents; the milk is drunk and made into cheese and the flesh is also good to eat, the tongue and haunches being particularly liked. Pemican, an important article of food, is made by pouring fat over the pounded meat and mixing them well together.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Leech as a Barometer.

A leech confined in a glass jar of water will prove an excellent weather prophet. If the weather is to continue fine the leech lies motionless at the bottom of the jar and rolled together in a spiral form. If it is to rain, either before or after noon, it is found to have crept up to the top of its lodging and there remains till the weather is settled. If we are to have wind the prisoner wriggles through his limpid habitation with amazing swiftness and seldom rests till it begins to blow hard. If a remarkable storm of thunder and rain is to succeed the leech gives itself up to violent three-and convulsive motions. In frost, as in clear summer weather, it lies constantly at the bottom, and in snow, as in rainy weather, it pitches its dwelling on the very mouth of the jar.

African Grosbeaks.

The social grosbeaks of South Africa live in large societies. They select a tree of considerable size and literally cover it with a grass roof, under which their common dwelling is constructed. The roof serves the double purpose of keeping off the heat and the rain, and 400 or 500 pairs of birds are known to have the same shelter. The nests in this aerial dwelling are built in regular streets and closely resemble rows of tenement houses.

A Financial Genius.

"He is a financial genius. In a restaurant the other day he spilled a cup of coffee over a fellow's gray trousers."
 "And got out of paying for them, eh?"
 "Why, he talked the other fellow into paying for the coffee."

The Man Behind the Message.

The value of a thing depends largely upon who says it. Words may be bullets, but character must be the powder at the back of them to give them projectile force. The man behind the message is as important as the man behind the gun.
