Oil Versus Water as a Dust Preventive.

The superintendent of parks in Kansas City found that in one year a saving of 34 per cent was effected by using oil instead of water as a preventive of dust. Sprinkling would have cost for that year $10,207.32. Oiling cost $10,671.44. The superintendent said that occasional light applications of oil during the season improved the wearing surface of the driveways. The damage to the wearing surface comes largely from attrition of the grit or dust on the roadway, and oil, he pointed out, compacts the grit or dust, thus checking deterioration at once and preventing the damage that comes from automobile travel.

Flat Roads Versus Convex.

Flat roads, as opposed to those of convex section, are recommended in the London board of trade traffic report as tending to minimize the splashing of pavements with mud.

Building of Good Roads.

Suggestions For the Treatment of Rural Highways.

NO PATCHWORK WHATSOEVER

The Work to Be Done in Sections—A Mile Should Be Carefully Finished in Its Entirety—How the Roadway Ought to Be Cared For.

How good roads should be made and how they should be cared for is tersely described in the Iowa Homestead by an enthusiast, who says:

In the first place, there should be no patchwork roadmaking having for its object only to make one particular spot passable. Road work should be done in sections. For instance, a mile of road should be taken and completed in its entirety. Every inch of it should be made a good and safe road. I venture the assertion that not more than one mile of road in every ten is safe or free from some dangerous trap to cause trouble to careless drivers or those not given to close observation of the roadways. They should be made so that a child might safely drive over them.

Beginning, I would establish a reasonable grade so that no steep hills remain when the work is finished. I would make over the entire width of the road from fence to fence. I would make the actual roadway of usual width, with only rise enough in the center to shed rain. From the gutter at the side of this roadway I would make a smooth and even grade to the fence line. Then I would compel the property owners along the road to keep the roadside well set in grass and to mow and care for it just as they do their meadows. No deep, unsightly and dangerous gullies would be permitted, and the man who scraped a lot of grass, weeds, clods and trash into the center of the road should at once be condemned to penal servitude for life. Capital punishment would be too good for the one who scoured his plow in the road.

The road worker who plowed up a stretch of road late in the fall and left it to mellow up until spring should be banished to roadless Siberia. A plow has no place in any road that has once been properly made. The care of a road made according to my plan would be only that of going over it occasionally with a drag. The occasion for the use of the drag, however, should be from the viewpoint of the need of the road and not the convenience of the operator of the drag. No man would be permitted to drive a drag over a road unless he were a licensed graduate of a roadmaking school. A road drag is a dangerous thing (for the road) in the hands of a man who does not have sense enough to use it.

I would build a complete and effective drainage system to take care of the water that finds its way to the road—not a guesswork one, but one planned by a drainage engineer who knew how.

I would make culverts and bridges the width of the road. No small culverts should be built. They invariably fill up and remain a damage. A good, big concrete bridge is the safest and cheapest that can be made.
