The Town.

Bend is the best known of the Central Oregon towns and the most talked of town in the West to-day. In all Oregon no city has been located with a keener eye to future development and none is situated more beautifully or healthfully.

Bend is the distributing point for an empire of untouched and unmeasured potential wealth—timber, grain, fruit, stock, dairy, garden, mineral and manufactured products.

Bend is a thriving town with a water system, electric lighting system, free library, two solid banks, excellent hotels, a newspaper and many other municipal assets worthy of a town several times its size.

Bend has easy access to large quantities of the best of clay for brick making purposes and many varieties of building stone. This together with the inexpensive lumber manufactured on the spot, offer excellent advantages for construction.

Bend High School graduates are admitted to the State University without examination, and the lower grades are as distinctive in their excellence.

Bend has four prosperous churches and many secret and benevolent societies.

Bend homes are the finest and most artistic in all Central Oregon.

Bend is in every respect as attractive to the homeseeker as to the investor.

Railroads.

BEND, THE PROPOSED TERMINUS OF THE OREGON TRUNK RAILWAY, IS THE FIRST JOINT HILL AND HARRIMAN STATION SOUTH OF THE COLUMBIA LOCATED DIRECTLY ON THE DESCHUTES RIVER. Trains on the Hill line will be running into Bend by June 1st. The Harriman system have officially announced the continuation of their line via Bend to connect with the Natron-Klamath cut-off.

Bend will be the junction of the east and west Hill line extending across the state and connecting with the Burlington at some point in Idaho, surveys having been completed and all maps filed.

BEND, WITH TWO OUTLETS INTO THE MARKETS OF CALIFORNIA AND TWO OUTLETS INTO THE MARKETS OF PORTLAND AND THE NORTH, AND A DIRECT OUTLET FOR ITS TIMBER PRODUCTS TO THE WAITING MARKETS OF THE EAST, HAS AN UNSURPASSED ECONOMIC AND STRATEGIC POSITION.

Bend will distribute the products to and from the territory that will profit most by this, the greatest railroad building in America to-day.

Irrigation.

Bend is headquarters for the Central Oregon Irrigation Company, whose Carey Act segregation embraces 218,000 acres in the immediate vicinity. Upon this soil, which is a rich volcanic ash practically all of the products of the temperate zone can be grown. Fruit raising is as yet in its infancy, but, with every prospect of a bright future. Alfalfa, clover, oats, wheat and all root crops thrive. Sugar beets produced here excel in quality and yield, and will form the foundation for a vast industry. Prof. Whitcomb, of the Oregon Agricultural College, after a careful investigation, says that the territory adjacent to Bend offers opportunities for dairying that are unexcelled.

Bend will profit by Irrigation, the miracle worker.

Dry Farming.

Bend is headquarters for more than 250,000 acres of wheat land, now open under the 320-acre dry farming homestead act, which permits settlers to take up that amount of land and acquire title by five years residence, with a specified amount of annual improvement. Crop experts predict that the new Central Oregon wheat lands will in time double the wheat output of Oregon and Washington combined. The new settler upon these lands finds a level sagebrush covered plain, free from rock, with well water easily obtainable and with from 9 to 14 inches of rainfall. Through the richest section of this territory the east-and-west Hill line from Bend will be built. Its future is one of vast possibilities.

Bend is so situated that all the products of this territory can be brought to it on down grade hauls over year-around good roads.

Bend has the cheap power to operate four mills for the wheat of this tributary territory.

Water Power.

Bend has 250,000 horse power easily obtainable from the Deschutes, "The River of Gold." A 1700 horse power plant now supplies electricity to practically all the residences and business houses in the city. Nowhere is more abundant or cheaper power obtainable. Bend's nearness to the supply of raw material and the combination of cheap and readily obtainable power spells a great manufacturing future.

Timber.

BEND IS WHERE RAILROAD, IRRIGATED LANDS, RIVER AND TIMBER FIRST MEET. Tributary to Bend on down-grade hauls is 20,000,000,000 feet of the finest yellow pine timber to be found anywhere. Besides providing the cheap power for the milling of this timber, Bend offers the best of mill pond facilities. The manufacturing by companies who have large holdings of this timber and who have signified their intention of locating at Bend will support a population of 10,000 people, conservatively estimated. Bend is the natural milling and distributing point for all of this timber.

Recreation.

Bend's call to the out-of-door enthusiasts is most alluring. No stream in the state can offer fishing that compares with the Deschutes. Bear, deer, cougars and wild cats are numerous in the mountains, and small game, such as ducks, geese, swan, squirrel and rabbits are plentiful. Bend has been favored in having more and different places of scenic beauty and interest within easy access than any other point in Oregon. Bend should be included in the itinerary of every tourist. Bend, the beautiful, will delight the sportsman.

Climate.

Bend with 320 days of sunshine during the year, its dry bracing air, its light precipitation and lack of excessive heat or cold offers climatic conditions that are second to none.

To Get Here.

Take the North Bank Railroad and Oregon Trunk Railroad to Madras via Clark, Wash., or the O. R. & N. R. R. and Deschutes Railway to Madras via The Dalles, and thence by automobile or stage to Bend.

We believe that the Bend country offers unexcelled opportunities for the homeseeker and investor. To convince you of this fact we ask that you make a personal investigation. Then you will agree with us.
