Never has the future held more brilliant promise for Bend than it does today. Scarcely, even, did the announcement of the railroad's coming, made two years ago, mean so much to Bend as does the recently consummated townsite transfer. Now, perhaps for the first time in her brief history, can Bend assert, without fear or possibility of contradiction, the absolute certainty of her big destiny. With large saw-mills assured, with flour mills, woolen mills and distributing houses looking toward Bend for location, with a double railroad terminus, with the greatest tributary free-land territories rapidly developing, with Oregon's greatest irrigation enterprise surrounding her, with unlimited water power, endless timber and climate and scenery unequalled, and now with the backing of the most powerful interests in Central Oregon, Bend cannot but forge ahead from the thriving town of today into the metropolis of tomorrow.

The Dalles land office broke all previous records for entries in March, there being a total of 295 reported by Receiver Moore. Of these 248 were homestead filings. During the first week in April there were 92 entries, giving indications that this month's record would beat that of March. The most gratifying feature in this connection is that a big portion of these applications for government land were made at Bend, and that the territory is tributary to Bend. With a good road penetrating the heart of the new farming district, the homesteaders will profit by trading in Bend and marketing their products here, while on the other hand, the town will be likewise greatly benefited. With the natural advantages it has, and added to this the fact that it will be the center of a rich farming community, Bend will surely go forward by leaps and bounds.

Mileposts along any highway are a great aid to travelers, and the move to have such on the new Bend-Earns road is in the right direction.

The cartoonist of a well known daily paper of the middle west recently pictured Jack Frost in elfin garb painting the leaves of a maple tree. The sentiment is a rather attractive one and quite generally held, but the fact seems, on the contrary, to be that the leaves of deciduous trees take on most beautiful colors when there are no frosts whatever. The present autumn gives nice illustration of the truth of the above statement, as soft maples and even bur oaks have shown considerable color when in seasons of early frost they frequently show no color at all.

C. G. Patten of Charles City, Ia., one of the veteran horticulturists of the country, who has won medals at meetings of the National Pomological society for the best display of apples grown by exhibitor, has this season picked several specimens of a new variety of apple, which he has named the Couillard-Hybrid. It is a cross of a pip-pip on a native wild crab, in form resembling its wild parent, in color its taste and its flavor having the peculiarities of both. The fruit is of medium size, green in color, and the tree upon which it grows seems to be perfectly hardy.

A man who employs farm labor doesn't need to be with his employees more than a couple of weeks to form a pretty definite opinion as to those men having the stuff in them to make sufficient headway some day to own farms of their own. The hired man who is slack, indifferent as to how he does his work and soddies when the boss isn't looking, it is pretty safe to assume, will continue to be just this kind of unsatisfactory help all his days. If he should by chance have a wife and children dependent on him it is fair to assume that the former will have to take in sewing and washing to earn enough money to clothe and educate the children. This chap referred to is not only a worthless stick for any man to hire, but a poor excuse as a husband and provider and of little or no worth in the community in which he lives.

TEACHERS MEET

CROOK COUNTY INSTITUTE HELD HERE

Sessions Well Attended and Good Program Carried Out—Topics of Interest to Educators Discussed in Papers Read

The annual Crook County Teachers' Institute was held in Bend last Friday and Saturday and was largely attended. There were present teachers from Prineville, Redmond, Laidlaw, Rolyat and other towns, and a number from rural schools nearby. A splendid program of addresses and papers was carried out, and the exercises were both entertaining and instructive. A pleasant feature was the musical numbers given at the several sessions, these being especially enjoyed by the visitors. In every way Bend showed herself an excellent host, the staff of the local school extending a hearty welcome to all visitors and showing them much hospitality.

The initial session of the Institute was opened with a vocal solo by J. Reeder, "Asleep in the Deep," Mrs. Lindborg accompanying.

Miss R. B. Parrott then delivered a paper upon "visible history," placing before her hearers first scenes from the Trojan War and later visiting Rome, Venice, France and England, with the aid of excellent stereopticon views thrown upon a sheet stretched across the stage.

E. L. Coe, of the Prineville schools, read an interesting paper dealing with the importance of moral education in the schools.

The First Grade pupils then sang and went through a little drill, making a laughable "hit."

"The Modern Teacher" was the title of Miss C. V. Conway's excellent paper with which the evening's exercises closed.

The program of Saturday morning's exercises at the school house included addresses by ten of the local faculty and three visitors.

After a musical number, Miss Harriet L. Dolsen spoke upon "Geography," its importance and its many varied aspects. This was followed by an address upon "Primary Reading," in which Miss Ethel Moore had much that was of interest to say concerning methods of instruction. Miss Nona Richardson, whose subject was "Language," had much to say of value, and was followed by J. E. Myers, who discoursed upon "Arithmetic." O. C. Colegrove closed the morning session with a talk upon "Industrial Work in the School," in which he dwelt upon the growing realization of the importance of this branch of modern education.

Saturday afternoon, at Linster's Hall, the program was as follows, commencing at 1:30:

On Saturday evening, J. C. F. Harrington delivered an illustrated lecture upon South American travel, Miss Evelyn Lane Walker discussed the "Normal Course in High Schools," and Miss Rosa B. Parrott spoke upon the "School as a Social Center."

The evening's musical program was as follows:

- Solo, "That's What the Rose Said to Me,".....J. Reeder
- Solo, "Unto Thy Heart,".....
-Mrs. Lindborg
- Obligato.....Iva West
- Accompanied by Mrs. Douglas.
- Solo.....J. E. Sawhill
- Duet, "The Crucifix,".....
-Mrs. Wenandy and Mrs. Lindborg.

Among the Prineville teachers who attended the institute were Prof. R. A. Ford, Prof. E. L. Coe, Prof. Myers, R. L. McBain, Miss C. V. Conway, E. Brobst, Mrs. E. Walker, Miss Theresa Cassidy, Miss Vivian Allan, Miss Ethel Moore, Miss Elsa J. Smith, Miss Alvilda Wilson and Mrs. Elmer Clark, all of whom were guests at the Pilot Butte Inn.

Train Your Child.
Correction does much, but encouragement after censure is as the sun after a shower.

Blessed be the hand that prepares a pleasure for a child, for there is no saying when and where it may bloom forth.

In the man whose childhood has known crosses there is always a fiber of memory that can be touched in gentle lessons.

When a child returns from a neighbor's house don't question him as to what was said or done there unless you wish to sow seeds of gossip and mischief.

Chum With Your Opposite.

It is a fine idea for the business girl to chum with her opposite. If you are inordinately inclined to gaiety or laziness a serious, intellectual friend will tone you up.

If you need toning down in the way of nerves and a too strenuous ambition find a friend who loves physical exercise, jokes, dressmaking and housekeeping.

If you are a natural born anchorite try to hobnob with the girl who gives fudge parties and sees the world from another angle.

That's the sensible way to lower the average, don't you think so?

GREATER BEND'S GREATEST STORE.

VERWHELMING CROWDS of eager buyers marked our opening day, and it is not by accident that we enjoyed such remarkable activity on that day. The substantial reason is that our line is booked upon reasonable prices, fresh, clean and up-to-date goods. It costs money to be behind the times. We will be adding to our line each day until we have completed our stock with every article of good eatables to meet the demand. Woman votes in some of the states and it is said she rules in all of them, so we cater to trade that influences all the buying. Nothing will appeal to a woman as quickly as a clean and neatly kept grocery store with a fresh and up-to-date stock to select from, and all of this we expect to have just as soon as conditions of freighting and rates will permit us. We will advertise our very low prices just as soon as we can make our stock more complete. Our terms are cash but our prices are the lowest and if you don't trade with us we both lose money.
