OPPORTUNITIES IN THE EAST.

Any reader of these notes who may be investigating the cheap farms in eastern states will be interested in bulletin No. 64 issued by the bureau of plant industry at Washington and entitled "Agricultural Conditions in Southern New York." The circular was prepared by M. C. Burritt after a year's careful investigation of the subject. The author discusses not only present conditions and causes leading up to them, but suggests methods by which they may be improved, including a discussion of the movement to the cheap western lands and to the cities the circular says:

"People are turning toward the country and the cheap eastern lands. Success in farming in the region will depend on the practice of such a system of farming as will not only give a remunerative cash return at the present time, but will build up the fertility of the soil. Once good conditions are restored the land is well adapted to the keeping of live stock, particularly sheep raising; to general farming, especially hay and potatoes, and to the growing of certain kinds of fruit. These southern New York lands offer excellent opportunities for intelligent young men with energy. They can be purchased cheap, they respond readily to the proper treatment, they are near to our great markets, and they are certain to increase in value."

DRY FARMING EXPERIMENTS.

The directors of the North Platte (Neb.) agricultural experiment station have been carrying on some experimental work along the line of cereal production which should be of practical value to dry farmers in other sections. On the forty-eight plots devoted to growing wheat in a season following the summer following an average yield was secured of 30.2 bushels per acre. It was found that plots which had been sown at the rate of two pecks per acre yielded as well as those on which five pecks were sown—in fact, the two smallest returns were from plots on which five pecks had been used. The lowest returns obtained from growing small grain were on land which had been in alfalfa the preceding year. Five to six bushels of oats were secured following broom grass on corn land from ten to twenty bushels on land summer fallowed thirty bushels. The evidence derived from the above tests seems to show a decided advantage in favor of summer fallowing over any other system of handling.

BUDWEISER BEER

The Silvertooth Saloon is the best place in Central Oregon to buy beer. Our private cold storage plant, soon to be erected in Bend, will give us every facility for properly handling beer. At Portland the beer will be loaded into refrigerator cars direct from the cold storage, and hauled to Bend and placed in our cold storage without being allowed to vary one degree in temperature. Any expert chemist will tell you that this is the only way to keep beer RIGHT. And that's the way you want it, of course. If our schooners aren't large enough, we'll put a handle on a keg for you. Yours to please,
