TUMALO, July 18.—The State Desert Land Board, while on its recent Central Oregon trip, looked over the old Columbia Southern irrigation system.
The woods around here was full of forest rangers and fire fighters last week fighting the fire started from a sheep camp. The rangers informed The Bulletin correspondent that about 3,000 acres had been burned over, mostly timber-owned by private interests.

OLD NEW ENGLAND WAYS.
Curfew Still Rings, and District Schools Still Flourish.
Everywhere, even in the midst of the most flourishing and progressive cities and towns, there are examples of the work and evidences of the lives of the fathers—old houses, rows of stately elm trees, old business buildings with their queer gable ends to the street—while ever and anon there are still to be encountered men who adhere to the dress and fashion of life current two or three generations ago. There are everywhere reminders of the glory that was. There are many households that are conducted almost as in the colonial times. Supper is yet the evening meal throughout rural New England and in a goodly proportion of the city homes as well, and it is not only supper in name, but the same foods are served in the same manner.
What are called primitive customs survive. The curfew rings from many church steeples, though leniency is practiced with respect to the ordering of lights out at the same time. The district school exists everywhere in the more remote and smaller sections. The town academy has not wholly surrendered to the modern high school. A majority of the farms are still worked as great-grandfather worked his, though this is cited solely as a pictorial element of charm, not as an industrial fact to flaunt.
The New England style of architecture gives way to more modern conceptions with stubborn slowness. Most of the country churches are redolent with suggestion of the storied past, and the echoes from the pulpits often serve to strengthen the illusion. The old fashioned gentleman and lady are present at every church service and at every village function. We cling to the memories and the habits of the past, and by so doing we exasperate the more progressive among our younger people.—Boston Chamber of Commerce Publication.
Making It Worse.
Willie had just received a severe spanking. "Now, sir," said his father, "you go straight over into the corner there and sit down."
A semihumorous thought struck Willie. He stopped howling, and a sheepish grin overspread his face. "Gee, pa," he remarked, "but that sorter 'tubbs' it in!"—Exchange.
