IMPERTINENT QUESTION NO. 11

The railroad will be operating to Bend in about seven weeks. What is being done about arranging for a celebration which will be a credit to the town upon such an important occasion?

LIDLAW MERITS AID.

At Saturday's pleasant entertainment at Laidlaw, while harmony was distinctly the watchword, there yet were some remarks made which indicated a feeling that some Laidlaw people, at least, felt that their town at various times had received hard knocks at the hands of Bend people. Such may be the case; in fact, there is little doubt that there are here, as in every town, men who think the best way to help themselves is to disparage the other fellow. The condition is unfortunate; also, it hurts the "knocker" even more than the "knooked."

But that is not the question. The true feeling of the overwhelming majority of representative Bend people is a desire to help Laidlaw in every possible way. From purely selfish reasons, if from no others, this must be true, for what helps Laidlaw, but seven miles distant, inevitably helps Bend.

To tell the truth, Laidlaw is more fortunately situated, in some respects, than is Bend. It has a splendid farming country adjacent to it. It is true that unfortunate and, indeed, criminal difficulties have been experienced in connection with the conduct of its irrigation enterprise, but the rotten mess which has held back the merited development of the section is drawing to a close, and if further delay is experienced in getting justice and action from "the powers that be" it is for Bend not to criticize the situation, but to do its utmost, individually and collectively, to force speedy and proper adjustment.

In another vastly important asset Laidlaw is to be congratulated. No town on the west side of the county, where the bulk of the taxes are paid, has as many or as good roads as has Laidlaw. With this fundamental transportation necessity so well provided, Laidlaw has a big leverage on prosperity; its splendid situation in this regard is well a matter of envy to dwellers in less fortunate communities.

So let Bend pull its hardest for Laidlaw; and let Laidlaw realize that Bend wants to help, and give it an opportunity to do so. The prosperity of one spells the enrichment of the other.

Probably next week the matter of granting water and light franchises in the additions of Bend will come before the council. Hitherto the public service corporation which has been serving Bend has been operating in portions of these additions without franchise. Now it is prepared to enlarge such service; furthermore, it takes the ground that not only for the proposed enlargement, but even for the operation of the service already existing, a franchise must be in its possession.
Otherwise, it declares, it is operating illegally. If Bend is to have this enlarged service, and, indeed, any service in its residential additions, it would appear essential that the company supplying such service be provided with a franchise for such operation. The fact that such franchise cannot, under the laws, be exclusive, would seem an added reason why immediate action be taken towards supplying the dential districts in question.

With no assurance as to the manner in which the recipients would conduct the street sale of souvenirs, etc. during the Railroad Day celebration, the Council has given an "exclusive" privilege for this business. Probably this wouldn't hold. But if it did, the principal is all wrong. Every encouragement should be given to all legitimate undertakings which will add to the magnitude and interest of the occasion. Licenses should be collected—but not exclusive ones.
Experienced men in the various lines connected with such a celebration should be encouraged to come and not be shut out.

The Silver Lake Leader, whose destinies are now guided by an ex-Seattle Times man, broke forth into an "extra" last week. The cause of the journalistic eruption was a raid in Paisley, wherein there was confiscated "300 gallons of beverage, part of which has been identified as whiskey," says the Leader. The method of the identification process was not described. Wonder how it was done?

One of the very best investments the city ever made was the purchase of the street sprinkler. The street sprinkling has done a vast deal toward making the town attractive this summer.

Spoiled It All.
A farmer went to hear John Wesley preach. Wesley said he would take up three topics of thought. He was talking chiefly about money. His first was, "Get all you can." The farmer nudged a neighbor and said: "This is strange preaching. I never heard the like before. This is very good." Then Wesley discoursed on "Industry," "Activity," "Living to Purpose," and reached his second division, "Save all you can." The farmer became more excited. "Was there ever anything like this?" he said. Wesley denounced thriftlessness and waste, and he satirized the willful wickedness which invades in luxury, and the farmer rubbed his hands, and he thought, "All this I have been taught from my youth up," and what with getting and what with hoarding it seemed to him that "salvation" had come to his house. Hur Wesley advanced to his third head, which was "Give all you can." "Ah, dear, ah, dear," said the farmer; "he has gone and spoiled it all!"

A Deceptive Fish.
A naturalist who is familiar with Ceylon writes: "In the clear water of Colombo harbor it is not uncommon to see fallen and faded leaves of the jak tree floating a short distance below the surface or sinking slowly to the bottom. Certain small fish, commonly known as sea bats, mimic these leaves both in form and color in order to escape detection. Both in shape and color they look when in the water like waterlogged leaves, but when removed from their native element this resemblance is immediately lost. They float in the water half sideways and all swim in the same direction, turning simultaneously. On one occasion Mr. Willey attempted to capture one of these sea bats in a rock pool and directly he made a plunge with the hand net saw nothing except what he took to be a jak leaf slowly and inertly sink to the bottom. To his astonishment, as he withdrew the net the supposed leaf righted itself and darted away."

Calamities of Authors.
Homer was a beggar; Plautus turned a mill; Terence was a slave; Cervantes, the author of "Don Quixote," died of hunger; Bacon lived a life of meanness and distress; Raleigh died on the scaffold; Spenser, the charming, died in want; the death of Collins was through neglect, first causing mental derangement; Milton sold his copyright of "Paradise Lost" for £15; Dryden died in poverty and distress; Otway died prematurely and through hunger; Lee died in the gutter; Steele lived a life of perfect warfare with balliffs; Gold-smith's "Year of Wakenfeld" was sold for a trifle to save him from the grip of law; Savage died in prison at Bristol, where he was confined for a debt of 48; Butler lived a life of penury and died poor; Chatterton, the child of genius and misfortune, destroyed himself.

Early Horse Race Prizes.
Prizes for winners of horse races hundreds of years ago took curious forms. The earliest was the "briglia d'or," or golden bridle. After this the prize in England was a bell. This idea was taken from the custom among owners of pack horses of decorating the best horse, which led the caravan, with a bell, so that on dark nights and in dangerous places the whereabouts of the leader might be known and the others follow boldly.
At Carlisle silver bells were used for by the mess troops and dastmen, and specimens of these bells are still retained in the town hall.—St. James Gazette.

Card Playing.
Card playing began in India in the sixth century. It was introduced into Europe by orientals some time prior to the thirteenth century. Saracens popularized the amusement in Spain and Italy. The taste for the game afterward spread to Germany, where it commenced to be indulged in about 1275. Its appearance in France was mentioned in the records of that country in 1363. Heraldic cards were first known in England in 1662.—New York Telegram.

His Trade.
"And you say you have a trade?" asked the kind lady at the door.
"Yes'm," said the tramp. "I'm a worker in precious metals and stones." "Indeed? And can't you get anything to do?"
"Now, de perfice and de jewelers are all ud to be."

Dog Luck.
Police Officer in order that the villain who caught and kissed you in the dark may be tracked, we must set our police dog after him. So to trace the wren you must give Nero a glass.—

And That Came Near Being Right.
"Johnny, correct this sentence on the board: 'He drank a number of loasts.'" Johnny went to the board and wrote, "A number of toasts drunked him."—
