TO ESTABLISH CROOK COUNTY FARM

Demonstration Work of Aid to Farmers of Central Oregon Will be Carried on—Best Varieties of Plants and Method of Agriculture Determined

CORVALLIS, Nov. 14.—A new experiment station and demonstration farm is to be established soon by the Oregon Agricultural College. At the November meeting of the board of regents it was voted to accept this responsibility, since $10,000 has been subscribed for the purpose by the Crook County Court, the O-W. R. & N. Co., the Oregon Trunk Railway and the Portland business men's committee.

"This is a very important movement in promoting the development of that portion of the state," said Pres. Kerr in addressing the regents on the subject. "The people there are laboring under many disadvantages, to overcome which the work of an agricultural expert in connection with the demonstration farm will be invaluable.

"The purpose is not only to give the people such information as will be helpful to them but actually to demonstrate the best varieties and methods for that section. It has been thought advisable to turn the money over to the college and to allow our experts to expend it to the best advantage of that particular territory.

"We will do field work largely, having a demonstration farm for dry farming under Central Oregon conditions, and an irrigation farm. Two experts will be employed with an office centrally located. Besides this work a most important part of the plan is the cooperative work to be carried on by the farmers in these districts on their own farms under the supervision of the experiment station and director."

In a letter from the four interests contributing the fund for the establishment of the experiment station, they said to Pres. Kerr:

"Our thought is that you will disburse this fund just as you would an appropriation by the Legislature, and it is not our desire to embarrass you by limitations, our hope being that so far as you find it to be of practical value, the fundamental ideas set out in the letter of July 10th be followed. However, there is not the least desire on our part to dictate in this respect, and you are at entire liberty to disregard any or all of these suggestions if you deem proper. It is our desire to cooperate in every way."

What is Doing in the Country to the Southeast of Bend

DRY LAKE, via Held, P. O., Nov. 4.—Everybody is busy clearing and seeding. Early sown grain is up and looks good.

Murphy Brothers of Tulsa, Okla., called on C. A. Bengston last week. They are expert deep well drillers in oil and gas as well as water. They were well pleased with this part of Oregon and will probably locate here next spring for their business and take up land also.

N. Kins and George Langford went to Bend to visit the demonstration train.

Messrs. Snyder and Reinsdorf are building a residence for F. Logan.

W. W. Brown's new road is now opened to Camp Creek. The big road grader is at work making a special finish to it.

Otis Logan bought a load of potatoes of N. Kins last week.

C. A. Bengston seeded part of his homestead this week.

HAD EYES, BUT SAW NOT.

Then She Realized What It Really Meant to Be Blind.
"Were you ever blind for an entire evening of your life—blind in the midst of a jolly company who were sewing and chatting and didn't in the least realize your plight?" asked a social worker recently. "That was what happened to me not long ago, and I must say it was a most uncomfortable experience. I sympathize with persons who have lost their sight now as I never did before.
"You see, I went to call upon a young girl from my home town who is being educated in a private institution for the blind near here. I had been to see her before, and so I was prepared for the way her companions crowded about me, felt my clothes, my hands and my face and remarked everything I had on, saying, 'How becoming her hat is—how pretty she looks!' and so on. Nor was I surprised when my friend conducted me through the classrooms, pointing out the new work and displaying some fine lace work she had started that morning, quite as though she could see it all.
"But on this visit, for the first time, I was invited to stay for supper and spend the evening with the girls. I was delighted to accept the invitation and enjoyed the meal, which was served by sighted waitresses in a well lighted dining room. But after that my experience came. We walked from the dining room into dim halls, and as we mounted the stairs to the sitting room we walked into utter darkness. I began to envy my friend, who tripped lightly by my side, while I could only grope my way awkwardly. Once in the sitting room I felt for a chair and dropped into it, waiting for the lights to be turned on. But the laughter and the chatter went on unconcernedly about me, and after a few minutes it dawned upon me that lights were not necessary in an institution for the blind at night; that the sitting room was no darker for those girls than it had been all through the beautiful, sunny day I had enjoyed so much. As my eyes grew a bit accustomed to the darkness I could perceive that the girls had drawn their chairs up around mine and were busy with embroidery and lace making as they talked.
"And for the rest of the evening I sat there trying not to let my blindness fret me, not to appear stupid when the girls, forgetful of my affliction, held up their work for my inspection. That was the time I realized what it really is to be blind."—New York Press.

Civilization!
A Japanese diplomatist is said to have exclaimed: "For 2,000 years we kept pace with the rest of the world and were known to it but by the marvels of our delicate ethereal art and the finely wrought productions of our ingenious handicrafts, and we were accounted barbarians! Not from the day on which we made war on other nations and killed many thousands of our adversaries you at once admit our claim to rank among civilized nations!" On reading the foregoing in the Java Times we are reminded of Professor Kenny's story of the shipwrecked mariner who at dawn came across a gibbet and exclaimed, "Thank God, here is a sign of civilization!"—London Globe.

A Clever Phrase.
In a small volume of humorous letters and poems, one of these the classic "City of Prague," by the late William Jeffrey Prose, there occurs the following footnote to the prefatory memoir by Tom Hood, the editor of Fun, referring to Prose's apprentice connection with the Avonbury News: "I find among his papers a rough copy of verses for it about 'King' Cling, dated 1855, which wind up with this couplet:
"His courtiers found him out at last beneath the table sun, Prophetically pious, but indubitably drunk."
"It is not every lad of twenty who can pen an oar and smart a line as that last!"—London Chronicle.

Pope's Initials.
Alexander Pope was a victim of his initials. After the publication of the Dunciad one of the poet's enemies, who had suffered a severe trouncing in the satire, declared that if you took the initial letters of Pope's name and added the final letter of his surname you had his character. The "jest" caught on, and in 1728 appeared a pamphlet entitled "Pope Alexander's Supremacy and Infidelity Examined." The frontispiece to this now forgotten pasquinade represented Pope in the form of an ape, with his head resting on his hand, and his elbow placed upon a pile of his own works.

Taking Every Precaution.
In a state of convalescence a West Philadelphia man became hungry. When his physician visited him the man said, "Doctor, I'm as hungry as a bear, but from what you tell me I mustn't eat anything."
"Quite correct," replied the physician, who is inclined to be somewhat absentminded, "and be sure above everything else, to chew it thoroughly."
—Philadelphia Times.

Her Idea of It.
"My friend the architect has a hard job on his hands."
"What's that?"
"He has a rich customer who wants him to build an Italian villa with a room around her new cottage."
—Baltimore American.

CLAIMS are easily made; but not always easily proven. We would not make the claims we do for the high quality of our stock if we were not convinced of their truth, and if we didn't have so many compliments from customers on the superiority of our trees, and the most excellent manner in which they were packed, enabling them to arrive at destination in prime condition. This last item, good packing, is easily overlooked by many, but is one of importance, and is one of the many instances where our attention to detail keeps up the high standard of our trees.
