COMMITTEE'S REPORT

Text of Document Presented and Accepted by Council Last Week.

As stated last week, The Bulletin was unable to give the text of the report of the special committee appointed to investigate alleged election irregularities, and as there has been a demand by many people to know what was reported and put on the records by the council, the report is given this week. It follows:
"Bend, Oregon, December 19, 1911.
"To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Bend.

"Gentlemen:
"Your special committee appointed to investigate alleged irregularities attending the city election on the fifth day of December, 1911, begs leave to report as follows:

"It does not appear that this committee has the power to summon witnesses and administer oaths, but from diligent inquiry and personal knowledge and observation we are satisfied that gross irregularities occurred at said election:

"That the polling place was not protected as ordinarily required by law and persons engaged in electioneering crowded upon the election judges and urged forward those whom they were interested in voting, even engaging in rancorous disputes with said judges and with others present at the poll;

"That the city attorney appeared as the legal adviser of the election board and at the same time acted as partisan challenger, and his erroneous advice caused the election board to admit questionable votes without the oath required by law in such cases;

"That inducements were offered to influence voters, liquor, cigars and automobile transportation being among the influences;

"That a large number of persons having no legal residence in Bend voted at said election, and others voted who were not qualified in point of citizenship.

"Therefore, because of the numerous irregularities and unlawful acts that have come to our notice in connection with said election, we reach the conclusion that said election was not legally conducted; that it is impossible to say what the result would have been if the election had been conducted in a regular, legal and orderly manner; that public confidence in the election is greatly shaken if not entirely destroyed, and we recommend that said pretended election be declared and treated as a nullity and void.

"All of which is respectfully submitted.

"M. J. KELLEY, Chairman,
"THEODORE AUNE."

GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES.

Racial Marks Left by Our Early Explorers and Settlers.

While most of the states of the Mississippi valley, besides countless rivers and lakes in all parts of the country, bear Indian names, but a small number only of the towns that are the work of the white man have adopted names borrowed from the original owners of the land. Not one in ten, it has been pointed out, of the 150 large cities has an Indian name, and among those that have it is usually an adoption from some neighboring lake or stream.

The early explorers and settlers left their racial marks. Up the Hudson and Mohawk is pretty clear. The French influence in northern New York and Vermont and along the line of the great lakes is familiar in many names. Mississippi has no "saints" in its list, whereas, across the river, Louisiana, by nine parishes and many towns, rivers and lakes, perpetuates the religious tenets of its early settlers. Kentucky and Tennessee evidence the vocabulary of the hunter and trapper; Montana and Idaho that of the miner. All the region acquired from Mexico, particularly southern California, maintains in its place names the memory of its Spanish explorers and settlers.

There are relatively few Indian names on the Pacific coast. North of the Spanish belt cities and towns frequently reflect the loyalty of early settlers to the older states of the Union—Pittsburg Press.

THE FRUGAL ARABS.

They Live on Two Simple Meals of Bread and Dates a Day.

The daily routine of the Arab is simple and well ordered. He is up with the daybreak and as soon as possible loads his camels; then he rides for some four or five hours before he has his first morning meal; then he is off again until late in the afternoon, when a halt is made for the night. Supper usually consists of warm bread, with an onion or dates as a relish. Bread is prepared in as simple a manner as possible. While the coarse flour and water are being kneaded into dough a large fire is made, which provides a good heap of hot ashes. On part of these the flattened dough is laid, then covered with the remainder of the ashes.

In about fifteen minutes the dough is sufficiently baked. It is then well beaten to free it from ashes, broken in pieces and divided among those who from their bags have contributed the meal. After the evening feast coffee is made by some member of the party and, poured out into tiny cups, is solemnly handed around to each one.

Dates often take the place of bread in Arabia. There are many varieties, and the composition of the date does not differ so very much from that of bread. Fat is lacking in both, but this is supplied by the butter churned in skin bags suspended from a tripod and shaken or rolled on the ground.—Chicago News.

An Inconvenient Piano.

Leopold de Meyer of Dresden, a brilliant and popular pianist of his day, was once summoned to play before the sultan of Constantinople. Going thither, he borrowed a grand piano from one of the Austrian secretaries of legation and had it set up in a large reception room at the palace. There he awaited the coming of the sultan, but when that intelligent monarch entered the room he started back in alarm and demanded of his attendants what that monster was standing there on three legs. Explanations followed, but were in vain. The legs had to be taken off and the body of the instrument laid flat on the floor, and Leopold de Meyer, squatting cross legged on a mat, went through his program as best he could in that awkward attitude and without pedals. But the commander of the faithful was delighted, and when the last piece was played gave the artist over $5,000 as backwash.

Too Early.

One raw February morning an instructor in the University of Michigan was calling the roll of an 8 o'clock class in English.

"Mr. Robbins," said he.
"There was no answer."
"Mr. Robbins," in a slightly louder voice.

Still no reply.
"Ah," said the instructor, with a quiet smile, "come to think of it, it is rather early for Robbins."

The instructor was the late Moses Colt Tyler, who later became professor of history at Cornell, and it shows him in the pleasing light of a man who could be loyally gay at a gray and cheerless hour—no small feat, if one stops to consider an instructor's provocations to morning dullness.

Horse Riding in Ancient Times.
Stirrups were unknown to the ancients. Along the public roads there were placed staves to enable the horsemen to mount. Stirrups were used to some extent in the fifth century, but were not common even so late as the twelfth. Horseshoeing is a very ancient art. It is represented on a coin at Tarentum of about 350 B. C. It is said that William the Conqueror brought the first iron horseshoe to England.—London Graphic.

Putting It Mildly.
"That man seems to be proud of his stupidity," said the impetuous person.
"I wouldn't put it that way," replied the conservative friend. "I'd merely suggest that when it comes to a thirst for wisdom he's a prohibitionist."—Exchange.
