

HARNEY CATTLE GO TOMORROW

"BILL" HANLEY SHIPS
200 FROM BEND

Big Bunch, Delayed by Wet weather,
Expected to Leave For Portland
Tomorrow in Eight Cars—
Scales to be Installed

The largest shipment of cattle thus far sent out of Bend will leave tomorrow morning, when eight carloads of Harney county stock owned by Bill Hanley start for Portland.

There are over 200 head in the big bunch, which has been driven across from the Burns country. The cattle arrived yesterday, but due to the wet weather have been kept in shelter.

ter four miles east of town. It is expected that they will be brought in at daylight tomorrow and immediately loaded on the cars.

Because there has been some delay on the part of the railroads in erecting weighing scales at the Bend stockyards, these cattle were all weighed on the Wenandy Livery Co.

scales, a temporary chute being constructed there. It is understood that large scales, capable of readily accommodating the future shipments that are expected, will be installed at the stockyards immediately.

Hanley Uses Bend.

Bill Hanley is the biggest cattle raiser of the southeast country, and from the outset of railroad construction has stated that he would use Bend as a shipping point. It is probable that many other shipments from his ranches and others in Harney will follow.

DEMONSTRATION WORK

one of the superintendents of the demonstration farms will receive immediate consideration. As far as it is possible so to do, a visit will be made to the different neighborhoods, a certain amount of seed furnished to the co-operator, instructions given and later visits made—the crop harvested, of course, going to the co-operator but a record of the operation and yields going to the superintendent of the demonstrations.

No Expense to Farmer.

These co-operative trials will be little or no expense to the individuals undertaking them, since sufficient seed may be raised in each case to reimburse the farmer for his work. Since the season is already late for starting dry farming demonstrations, it is probable that only the late crops will be handled. For these perhaps only half an acre of representative ground thoroughly summer fallowed last year and cultivated early this spring or perhaps seeded to wheat last fall, which could now be disced up, would be required. Four or five acres more of crops already seeded might be used to demonstrate different methods of tillage for moisture conservation. The dry farmers however, should get into immediate touch with the superintendent of the dry land demonstration at Metolius as any co-operative work in this line must be started at once if at all. In the irrigated section it is probable that varieties of barley, oats, emmer, field peas, corn, grain sorghums, mangels, cow turnips, potatoes and onions may be tried. For these varieties perhaps not more than half an acre would be required in each of the sections suggested and perhaps a couple of acres more of alfalfa or clover on which to test different amounts and frequency of irrigation, etc.

Later in the fall if the work is continued on the dry farms the various fall grain varieties will be seeded on the co-operative fields and in the spring following the spring grains. Little can be done with small grains this spring on the dry farms, owing to the lateness of the season; hence, stress will be laid in the dry farming sections on the growing of alfalfa and field peas in cultivated rows for seed and of sorghums and corn for forage and potatoes as a money crop.

Meetings With Farmers.

After the seeding on the co-operative fields is completed later visits to these fields will be made by the superintendents, at which times, if the farmers so desire, meeting can be held and the farmers' problems freely discussed on all sides, both by the experts and the farmers themselves. Towards harvest time special meetings of all the farmers in the county will be called at the two demonstration farms so that the work being done there can be studied and a roundup held. In the offices of the superintendents will be found libraries on dairy farming and irrigation farming respectively, and some literature for distribution. The superintendents will announce the location of their offices and office hours at which they will always be found. Every day in the year these superintendents can be reached by letters or telephone from farmers who wish advice or suggestions and wherever it is possible it would seem necessary, the superintendents will visit the farms themselves. Every farmer in Crook county is urged to make the full possible use of the two demonstration farms and the two superintendents in charge of them, and at the same time to give these superintendents their heartiest support and encouragement, for their work is no means easy.
