CONCERNING SPY GLASSES.

There is little to be said regarding the unpleasant disclosures that have followed in the wake of Governor West's housecleaning activities. Perhaps the less said the better. What has already happened to several towns, and doubtless will befall several more, might have come to practically every community in the state, at one time or another, so far as provocation is concerned.

As regards the fight on Sheriff Balfour—which doubtless his political enemies will turn into campaign material—there are many decent people, standing for law and order, who do not believe, as the Governor would have them, that Balfour has neglected and broken the laws he is expected to enforce. A sheriff's job is a mean job. It has been a particularly mean job in Crook County. That a former administration notoriously neglected the law is a matter of common belief, if not of actual knowledge. Whenever Balfour has attempted to get convictions, he has been turned down by the people, as represented by their grand juries. It is a little as if The Bulletin told a country correspondent to send in news, and the correspondent gathered reams of it and submitted it for publication, and then The Bulletin put it all in the waste basket. How long do you suppose that correspondent would labor faithfully gathering more news—for the trash basket?

And then there is another phase, perhaps not vitally pertinent, but at least worthy of consideration. The Governor says: "I have no patience with a public official who sits idly by and permits these conditions to exist." Good. Let us have a thorough job, and let us begin near home. If Governor West wants it, as he seems inclined to, a big healthy job awaits him. "Every report received shows that Portland is as near a wide open town as it has ever been. The conditions are as rotten morally as they will could be." So says the Evening Telegram of Portland. Why not make powerful Portland, leader of Oregon's cities, a leader in another sense? And even at Salem, we suspect, the investigator might unearth unsavory finds, aside from those that concern politics.

Altogether, we are reminded of a story.

An army regiment once was at summer camp. The soldiers bathed in a river, near which was a farm house. Presently, the German farmer, parent of several buxom daughters, came to the Colonel, complaining that the proximity of the nude soldiers was scandalous and an insult to his daughters' feelings. The Colonel agreed, and ordered that the bathing place be removed half a mile further from the farm. But again the irate parent appeared and objected.

"Why, what is wrong now?" asked the Colonel. "The bathers are half a mile from the house. Your daughters can't possibly see them."

"Ach, yes they can," cried the farmer. "Dose girls of mine dey have spy glasses."

An instructive commentary upon the character of the development with which Bend is being favored is afforded by a glance at the present activity in church construction, plans and work. Two denominations already are actively engaged in the erection of handsome places of worship. In a few months Bend will have five splendid church buildings and that many organizations, all well attended, well supported and active in their chosen fields of accomplishment. It is a good record for any town. It is a specially creditable record for a new community, and simply illustrates the high character of the citizenship that is hastening forward Bend's growth from a substantial town to a city of real importance.

Some weeks ago The Redmond Spokesman had a lot to say about certain advertising with which Bend was being favored, and to which Redmondites objected, on the grounds that statements were exaggerated. We wouldn't be mean for the world, but we can't refrain from wondering if the Spokesman town just now isn't getting a little over-advertised, some of it—perhaps—exaggerated?

Both Wilson and Roosevelt have announced their allegiance to the cause of woman suffrage.

SIDELIGHTS ON SQUABBLE.

What West Says About Jones.
"I am satisfied that Mayor Jones is unfit to hold the office, the very fact of his conviction for gambling being sufficient proof in my mind. I am also satisfied of proof that the City Marshal has sat by and watched Mayor Jones engage in a gambling game and that would be sufficient to condemn him as unfit to hold his office."

What Dillon Says About it.
(The Portland Oregonian.)
Ex-Mayor H. F. Jones, of Redmond, had a "six full" and all his chips in the pot, when "Mr. Delaney," a traveling man from Portland, showed down a "king full" and swept in the pot.

That was five days before the Mayor was arrested, when it developed that "Mr. Delaney" was F. A. Dillon, manager of the International Detective Bureau, employed to clean up Redmond.

It was like a circus in town when the Mayor was tried, says Dillon, who has just returned after spending two weeks in his investigations. The local Justice of the Peace begged off from trying the case, he says, and the trial was held in a neighboring precinct, nearly two miles from the town.

Dillon says that he found the town running wide open, and after establishing a record as a "spender," easily was induced to sit into a little game of pinochle, which soon degenerated into poker.

Night after night he played, incidentally breaking the Mayor. Then Portland papers, carrying Governor West's ultimatum, reached Redmond and Mayor Jones prepared a proclamation, warning the saloons that thereafter gambling would not be tolerated. At his trial he said that he had "sat in" the game to get evidence, but the prosecution showed that he had remained and played four hours after seeing the village barber "cash in" a winner to the amount of $6.50.

Jones told Dillon that he was at one time Mayor of Denver, and for seven years business agent of the painters' union of New York.

What Jones Says About Governor West and Others.
(The Portland Oregonian.)

REDMOND, Aug. 19.—In an interview Mr. Jones today he said: "Ever since Crook County voted wet in the election two years ago this fall, Redmond has been the fountain head of a dissatisfied element who have kept the pot of discord and dissension boiling. They at one time published a paper called the Citizens' Call, but after a suit for criminal libel this sheet was discontinued. During the last year a new impetus was given to the movement by the arrival of Jackson M. Crenshaw, a Methodist preacher who was in trouble in Portland with another preacher over some land deal and had the case aired in the Police Court."

"After Governor West had expressed his Carrie Nation ideas in dealing with municipal problems this faction appealed to the Governor for his assistance. For answer, the Governor immediately rushed into print telling the public what he intended to do to Redmond. At this time no investigation had been made by the Governor nor had he asked any opinion of the business men. Commercial Club officers or City Council as to conditions here."

"A short time after airing his views as to municipal reforms needed here, the Governor started on his horseback ride to Idaho and his trip took him through Redmond. On his arrival here he was met by a committee consisting of the clerk of the hotel and seemed quite lonesome until an automobile arrived to take him to Deschutes to look over the irrigation system. The insurgent faction here, by the liberal use of the telephone and messengers, secured a goodly crowd from the country to hear the Governor when he returned in the evening."

The later occupies a newly created position on the Great Northern, that of Western Immigration and Industrial Agent, doing work similar to that performed for some years by Fred Graham of the Great Northern. Both Mr. Young and Mr. Elliott had entertained hopes of being able to get to the convention at Lakeview but developments in Portland requiring their immediate presence made the southern trip impossible.

Word was also received from Louis Hill of the Great Northern, expressing regret that messages recalling him to St. Paul made the Lakeview trip out of the question.

After a brief inspection here, the railroad party went out, en route to Portland.

CAPTURES WILD BEES.

Big Clark, the well known sawmill man who lives some seven miles to the southeast of Bend, has the distinction of capturing the first swarm of wild bees of whose capture there is any record in this section. The swarm was discovered at a water tank under his mill, and was easily and quickly captured. The bees are now permanently located at the Clark home, where they are working well and seem entirely satisfied with their new quarters.
