

AVIATOR TO FLY AT COUNTY FAIR

MANY OTHER ATTRACTIONS THIS YEAR

Exhibits From all Over County.
New Buildings and Good Race
Track Completed—School Children to Get Tickets.

PRINEVILLE, Sept. 16.—The First Central Oregon District Agricultural Society's fair to be held here October 16 to 19 will eclipse anything yet seen along this line in Central Oregon. There will be a number of new features, each of which itself will be a big attraction. According to present plans, there will be daily aeroplane flights, among other things. Speaking of the fair, Secretary J. F. Cadle said:

"An effort is being made to make this fair up to its name—a truly district fair, embracing in its scope the whole of Crook county. The fair board has decided to give complimentary season tickets free to all enrolled school children of the county, also to active teachers, editors and the clergy.

"An effort is being made to secure exhibits from all sections of the county, consisting of agricultural, dairy and in fact all of the resources of the county.

"With respect to amusements, we wish to say that the board has secured the services of a high-class aviator to give an exhibition each forenoon. This will be supplemented by the latest carnival entertainments, racing, etc. Not the least on the list of entertainments is the music which will be furnished by the 'Band from Rome' of Los Angeles, said by those who have heard it play to be the best band on the Pacific Coast. This feature alone will easily be worth going miles to hear.

Many New Buildings.

"We have a new matinee track, new and entirely modern grandstand with comfortable seating capacity for 1,000 people; a large new pavilion; entirely new stables and stalls for stock; a new poultry building—in fact, the whole grounds will be covered with new buildings throughout, all painted and brought down to date. The preparations for this fair are being made at an outlay of the comfortable sum of $12,000, showing that the present management means business and is determined that nothing will be left undone, within its power, to give every man, woman and child who cares for either recreation, instruction or amusement, the worth of their money.

"It will cost but little more to come to this fair than to stay at home for the management is preparing a commodious camp ground with all conveniences for camping, such as good water and wood and stables free. Horse feed, both hay and pasture adjoining the camp ground, at a nominal price. The management is especially desirous to receive and consider any suggestions that anyone may have to make which are within the bounds of reason in order to fulfill the wants of the fair-going public that may attend with us. Everybody should bend every effort to attend the fair this year, because they will certainly miss something if they do not."

LIVING MILK CARTS.

The Goats of Athens and Their Tenders With Their Tin Cups.

The bootblacks and newsboys of Athens are numberless and omnipresent, yelling out in shrill tones the latest edition or inviting customers in equally strident tones to have a "shine." Hot chestnut men, with charcoal braziers and stock in trade of a hundred big nuts, doze over their little fires or sell pistachio nuts, sesame seed or pumpkin seeds at the street corners. Much of the merchandise is carried by diminutive gray donkeys or by old women, who are almost lost under their huge loads of oranges or lemons or cauliflowers or brushwood.

The goats are a familiar sight of modern as doubtless they were of ancient Athens, and one sees them skipping over the rocks of Mars hill or the Pnyx or picking their way gingerly over the ruins of some ancient temple like chamols in their native wilds.

They are all muzzled and attended in flocks of ten or a dozen by a goatherd, who goes armed with three little tin cups, one holding about a pint, another a half pint and another a gill. When he finds a customer he stops a section of his living milk cart, milks it, hands over the diminutive amount of the lacteal fluid (it certainly is fresh milk) to the customer and receives his 5 or 10 lepta (1 or 2 cents) in return.—Christian Herald.

FIRST AMERICAN HEROINE.

Gunner Corbin's Widow, Who Fought at Mount Washington.

The first woman who fought for American liberty was Gunner Corbin's widow, at the capture of Mount Washington by the Scotch and Hessians. In the midst of the fight Gunner Corbin, struck by a ball, fell dead at his wife's feet as she was aiding him in his duties. It was not an uncommon occurrence for Irishwomen (as at Limerick) to share the dangers of the bivouacs, as instance the deeds of that other heroine, Molly Pitcher. Instantly, without a word, she stepped into his place and worked the gun with redoubled skill and vigor, fighting bravely until she sank to the earth, pierced by three grapeshot! Though terribly wounded, she finally recovered, but was disabled for life.

A soldier's half pay and the value of a soldier's suit of clothes annually voted her by the Continental congress (but soon discontinued) were all the reward that the first woman who fought for American liberty ever received for such heroic love, courage and suffering.—E. F. DeLancy in Magazine of American History.

Last Words of the Great.

Half of the store of "last words" treasured by the curious are apocryphal. Pitt cried out not as the records have it as to the state of his country, but for a pork pie, and Napoleon III. uttered neither lamentation nor prophecy, but desired to know if one standing at his side had been at Sedan. The falling lips of the great are expected to frame some pious or patriotic aphorism, and if they fall then phrases are coined for them. "Deathbed avowals and moralizing," said Djarrell when his own end was in sight, "are a legacy counted upon by the English public." He did not contribute to the collection, but one phrase escaped him. "I have suffered much," he sighed. "Had I been a nihilist I should have confessed all." What lay behind those words no two critics can be found to agree.—Dundee Advertiser.

Salmon Loaf.

For a delicious salmon loaf use two cans of salmon and a loaf of stale bread. Reject the crusts of the bread and remove the bones from the salmon. Break the bread into crumbs and the salmon into flakes and mix them together. Moisten with two beaten eggs, a tablespoonful of melted butter and one or two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice, with salt and pepper to taste. Add a tablespoonful of cream if not moist enough. Butter a bread tin and put the mixture into it. Bake the loaf for an hour or until thoroughly done. Serve with a cream sauce or a white sauce sprinkled with minced parsley.—New York Tribune.

A Lovers' Quarrel.

Korter turned up at the office one morning with a black eye and a missing front tooth. "Just a lovers' quarrel," he explained airily to his brother clerks—"a lovers' quarrel, that's all." "But, Kortor," cried the bookkeeper, "you don't mean to tell me that dainty Marie Lanigan did all that to you?" "No," Kortor admitted; "it was her other lover."—Exchange.

Of Some Use.

"Paw, what are flies and mosquitoes good for anyhow?" "My boy, there's a wire gauze factory down the street whose owner spends half his time on an ocean yacht."—Chicago Tribune.

Slippery.

Mary—Doesn't Ida keep her hardwood floors in beautiful condition? Alice—Perfect! Every one who goes there is carried out with a fracture or a dis-caution.—Harper's Bazar.

Sure Thing.

Gabe—Why would not women make good umpires? Steve—And why would they? Gabe—They always have the last word, don't they?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Men are so constituted that everybody undertakes what he sees another successful in, whether he has aptitude for it or not.—Goethe.

Baggy Pants.

"Why do you spend so much care on the crease of your pants, hey?" "It is important, dad, not to wear baggy trousers." "Important, is it? Why, you young cub, look here. Did you ever see a statue to a man who didn't wear baggy pants?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Consulting Papa.

"Papa, you know that George, who proposed to me last night, is coming for his answer this evening, don't you?" "Yes." "Oh, thank you, papa! That was the answer I was going to give him anyway!"—Chicago Tribune.

Terms of the Game.

He—Dearest, you're the goal of my affections. She (removing his arm)—Five yards for holding.—Harvard Lampoon.

Corketta announce that they will open a bakery with a short time, conducting it in addition to their present business. A suitable location has not yet been decided on. They will turn out everything in the bakery line when they get started.
