

FARMER SHOULD HAVE A GARDEN

EXPERT TELLS WHAT TO GROW

Long List of Vegetables That Make Life More Enjoyable Suggested. Hotbed is Necessary For Starting Many Plants.

BY P. H. SPILLMAN, Assistant Supt. Demonstration Farms

The requisites of the farmer's garden are: that it furnish a constant supply of fresh vegetables from late spring until winter; that the vegetables produced be of sufficient hardy nature to require little or no "pampering," as we all know that the ordinary farmer has not the time to give special attention to his garden although he could well afford to give more time than he ordinarily does.

In planting, put your rows far enough apart to allow cultivation with the horse cultivator—a garden that has the rows so close that they require hand hoeing often presents a rather neglected condition. It might be well to add here that when you use the horse cultivator, you ordinarily plant a larger garden than you otherwise would and we seldom ever see too large a garden, if well kept. This will of necessity require the selection of a garden site that is accessible to teams and tools.

To have the best garden one requires a hotbed to start the earlier varieties of vegetables. To make this hotbed, dig a trench the width of the bed that will hold two feet of closely packed horse manure and nine inches of soil. Have your frame on a south exposure and have the lower board not more than ten inches above the surface and the rear board six inches higher. This will give you the proper slope for your glass. Frames may be purchased especially constructed for this purpose or windows may be used in their place. Seeds are not sown in the hotbed for about six days after its preparation. The latter part of March or early in April would be the time to sow seed in the hotbed—early cabbage and cauliflower, celery and tomatoes, where they may be grown. After the early crop of plants are out, such vegetables as cucumbers, melons, etc. may be started in them.

After the plants are too large for the frame and still too tender to set out, make a cold frame. This consists merely of two boards set up so that a screen may be placed over the plants at night. This screen may be made of burlap or cheese cloth nailed onto a light frame.

What to Grow.
Vegetables that should be grown are radishes, carrots, turnips, table beets, parsnips, rutabagas, peas, beans, onions, lettuce, spinach, cabbage, cauliflower and celery. Early potatoes and sweet corn as well as pumpkins and squashes should be included in this list.

There are numerous varieties of the various root crops, almost any of which will be fairly successful here. For peas, any of the earlier varieties will do for first early. For medium later, Dwarf Telephone is a very desirable pea, while Little Gem and Yorkshire Hero are later heavy yielding sorts. For beans, try early maturing sorts as Burpee's Stringless Green Pod, snuggellow, Golden Wax and Early Soug Six Weeks. For early cabbage, Early Jersey Wakefield is a good variety, while numerous of the later ones do well. Extra Early Dwarf Erfurt is a desirable cauliflower, producing fine white heads. Of the onions, Oregon Yellow Danvers is one of the best. A succession of lettuce may be planted, any variety does well. Several sowings of radishes may also be made. For celery, White Plume and Golden Self-bleaching are good varieties. If you wish to try tomatoes, use Earliana. For sweet corn, Pochontas and Metropolitan are of the larger growing varieties and Golden Bantam of the smaller varieties. Any of the early potatoes may be used. A few of the Lady Finger variety may be grown as they are especially desirable for baking.

In a general way you may say that early gardens may be planted about the middle part of April, beans, etc., after the middle of May. Don't be afraid to thoroughly fertilize your garden spot, for it will pay you many times over with crisp, fresh vegetables this coming summer, thus adding much to the joy of living and also to the attractiveness of your place.

SCHOOL NOTES

(Reported for The Bulletin.)

The Janitor forgot to lower the flag last Friday night after school. Saturday morning it was discovered upsidown. Whether it had been in that position all day Friday or whether it had been turned upsidown Friday night by some passerby, is not known. However, on Sunday Mr. Shouse received a letter from a traveling salesman deploring such treatment of the flag.

Those pupils of last year's eighth grade who have not obtained diplomas are this year required to do again in the eighth grade those subjects in which their examinations were not of passing quality, but are permitted at the same time to take some work in High School instead of doing again those subjects in which they have passed the examinations.

A new flag for the school house has been received and will be formally raised at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon of this week if the weather is fit for an out-of-door exercise. A short program of patriotic songs will be given. Patrons of the school are invited to witness this formal raising of the new flag.

The outline of the school exhibit for the Central Oregon fair this week states that "any written work the teacher desires may be exhibited, but on this no individual or class prizes will be awarded", although many cash prizes are offered for industrial work done outside of school. On this account the Bend school will prepare no exhibit for the fair inasmuch as the teachers feel that no incentive to such preparation has been offered by the association.

Nine new pupils have entered school this week, one of them being in the High School.

The B. H. S. football team began practice last week. Mr. Shouse is doing the coaching.

All the members of the class of 1912 will be in college this year. Emily Schreder is at the U. of O., Margaret West, John Sather, Fred Lucas and Lawrence Smith at O. A. C. Also Steve Steidl, Max Richardson and Lyle Richardson of 1911 and Angeline Young of 1910 attend college this winter. Pauline West, who formerly went to Bend High, has also gone to O. A. C.

A Successful Interview.
The late Arthur McEwan when he was working on a San Francisco newspaper was attracted by the activities of a politician who was vulgar, illiterate and hideously ungrammatical in his method of expression. McEwan looked up this man and had a talk with him. Then he went back to the office and wrote the interview in the most perfect English, brilliant, polished and crammed the story full of classical allusions, quotations and big words. It was a most scholarly production, and McEwan considered the satire great. Next day McEwan had a call from the politician. "I wanted to thank you for that interview," he said. "It's bully. Just what I said. You must be a grand shorthand reporter."—Saturday Evening Post.

Martyrdom of the Bride.
A peculiar and barbaric marriage custom of the Kabyle women of Africa consists in the martyrdom of the bride, who, clad in her wedding finery, stands through an entire morning against a pillar in the village square, her eyes closed, her arms pressed to her sides and with only the narrow base of the column for a foothold, while a ring of villagers criticize and comment on her appearance.—Argonaut.

Evidence to the Contrary.
"You've had a bad cold in the head, have you, Brooks?" said Hivers. "Well, one good thing about that is that it doesn't make you cough."
Whereupon Brooks, without a word, exhibited the doctor bill he had just received.—Exchange.

Took it as a Compliment.
Magistrate (about to commit for trial)—You certainly effected the robbery in a remarkably ingenious way—in fact, with quite exceptional cunning. Prisoner—Now, yer honor, no flattery, please; no flattery. I begs yer.—London Sketch.

No Room For Him.
Mrs. Crawford—What's the advantage of a kitchenette apartment? Mrs. Crabshaw—Your husband can't come out to it when you're cooking.—Puck.

Physically impossible.
Chairwoman of Suffragette Meeting—Does any lady wish to make a motion? Voice—Yes, I do, but my gown's too tight.—Satire.
