

CORNERSTONE OF CHURCH LAID

PRESBYTERIAN CEREMONY SUNDAY

Many Interesting Documents Placed in Cornerstone, Commemorative of Day—Hope to Occupy New Building by Christmas.

On Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock occurred the formal laying of the cornerstone of the new Presbyterian church, the foundation work of which is already completed. The occasion was attended by a large gathering of people who assembled to hear the impressive ceremony performed by Dr. I. I. Gorby and his associates for the day.

After an invocation by W. R. Howell, Baptist convention pastor for Oregon, and appropriate singing by the choir, Dr. Gorby spoke briefly concerning the meaning of the new edifice and its important place in the spiritual development of the city, calling attention to its generous size as indicating the expected great growth both of Bend and of the congregation.

Assisting Dr. Gorby was the Rev. H. F. Harper of Milton, pastor of the Pendleton presbytery. Two boys, Ronald Sellers and Harold Borrowdale, acted as pages.

In a metal box, placed within the cornerstone, were deposited many characteristic souvenirs of Bend today. Among these were included lists of the membership of the various local chapters of fraternal orders, and other organizations, of the city officials, the school, officers of the church, a list of business houses of 1912 and a copy of The Bulletin containing an account of the church organizations of Bend. There was also placed in the corner stone a brief testimonial to the late Wallace H. Sellers, whose interest in the new building has been largely instrumental in making possible its construction.

Then occurred the actual "laying." In the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost we lay this cornerstone of a building to be erected here, under the name of the First Presbyterian Church, to be devoted to the worship of almighty God," said Dr. Gorby.

The new church building, it will be remembered, will be the most commodious and handsome religious structure in Central Oregon. It is being built with Bend stone, and has dimensions of 60 by 64 feet. Its cost will be about $5,000. It is hoped to have it completed by Christmas.

In speaking of the erection of the building, after the ceremonies, Dr. Gorby was enthusiastic in his mention of the services rendered by Fred Frodeson, who, he said, by his advice and practical builder's knowledge, had made possible the erection of the handsome structure along the desired lines and yet kept the expenditures within the means of the congregation.

A DRAMA IN REAL LIFE.

The Play That Was Enacted in the New York Subway.

A subway train was leaving Grand Central station with its usual 5 o'clock load. In a corner by the door sat a man whose worn clothes and shabby shoes were whitened with the lime he worked in. His face was lean and marked with tired lines, and his hands, joint swollen and blunted, hung wearily between his knees. A large woman, bejeweled and plumed, entered the car with a rustle of skirts and a jingle of finery that attracted all eyes. Swaying uncertainly on her high heels as she made for the only empty seat, she was thrown from her balance by a sudden lurch of the train, and only the laborer's promptly outstretched arm saved her from an ignominious fall.

She straightened herself with what grace she could and turned with a smile to thank the gentleman who had rescued her. A glance at the workman, however, made her expression change to one of disdain. With a perceptible sniff, she ostentatiously brushed her gown where it had come in contact with the man's hand and sank into the seat. Looking as if he had received a blow in the face, he shrank back and dropped his eyes in confusion.

Across the car, watching the little episode, sat a lady with a sleepy child in her arms. The little girl, perhaps three years old, was dressed in spotless white, from her dainty kid shoes to the deep frilled bonnet that framed her rosy face. When the guard called Seventy-second street the man slowly rose, and the lady opposite stood up with the child still in her arms. Touching the man's arm, she said, with a smile: "Will you not be kind enough to carry my baby up the stairs? She is too sleepy to walk and very heavy for me to lift."

The man straightened himself and, with face aghast, carefully took the little white clad form in his arms and led the way up the stairs. Passersby stared curiously at the trio, but there was no consciousness of that in the woman's gracious "Thank you! That was a great help."

As the mother and child passed on the man lifted his battered hat and turned homeward with a buoyant step.—Youth's Companion.

FLAMES THAT ARE NURSED.

Siam's Sacred Fire and the Fires of Vengeance of Sicily.

History records many strange examples of fires that are kept burning for long periods of time. The best known examples are those of pagan people who keep up perpetual fires as a religious custom.

The oldest known fire in the world is that in a Buddhist temple near Bangkok, Siam, which has been burning without interruption for two centuries. A priest is always on guard to watch the sacred flame. Every four years a new flame is kindled, but this is always lighted in the great brazier from a brand of the old fire.

The life of a grand vizier in Persia was once saved by a Parsee trader, who discovered and exposed a plot to kill the royal official. In spite of the fact that the Persians are Mohammedans and hold fire worshippers in contempt, a single flame has been kept burning continuously for seventy years at Serhad in honor of the bumble trader.

In inhabited lands within the arctic circle fires have been known to burn for years. This, however, is not so much a custom as it is a simple practice based on reasons of convenience and necessity because of the scarcity of wood or kindling of any kind to produce ignition. Oil is the fuel of the people of the snows.

In Sicily it has long been the custom of the vendetta to maintain the "fire of vengeance" until one's enemy has been slain. The criminal records of that fiery island are full of instances of fires that were kept up for years until death overtook the unfortunate victim whose life had been marked for destruction.—New York Times.
