LIDLAW

LIDLAW, Nov. 4.—The Halloween supper was a success both from a monetary and social standpoint. The ladies made $38.25 and had $30 clear to turn over to the league. The mystic spring was very awe-inspiring. The young men saw their future wives, the young ladies saw their future husbands, and the married seekers saw their future seconds, all in the same lovely (?) masked face at the bottom of the spring, which rippled and gurgled from a tub amid green branches and dead fodder. It was most thrilling. The ghost march was also a very ghoulish scene. The spirits mingled with the maskers as if they were perfectly used to it. The hay maid dispensed sweet cider and doughnuts and did a very lively business. Jack Wimer and Chancy Becker, after having a glass apiece, insisted on paying for it, and Chancy finally asked her if she cared who paid for their drinks. On being assured she did not he said, "Then if you don't care, we will just let you pay for it." The laugh was on the maid. Ted Becker also asked her if she would take his last cent for a drink. On being told she would he gave her the cent and called it square. She stood her ground,
