SOME FIGURES.

Here are some tag-end election figures:

In the electoral college Wilson received 442 votes, Roosevelt 77 and Taft 12. The total vote in the electoral college is 531. That necessary to a choice, 266.

In 1896 McKinley received 271 electoral votes and Bryan 176.

In 1900 McKinley received 292 electoral votes and Bryan 176.

In 1904 Roosevelt received 336 electoral votes and Parker 140.

In 1908 Taft received 328 electoral votes and Bryan 162.

The New York Sun gives this estimate of the popular vote: For Wilson 6,433,000, Roosevelt 4,174,000, Taft 3,491,000.

The condition of the streets after the recent rains is something of an object lesson. Bend is rapidly becoming a real city, and one of the chief assets and necessities of a city are a sewer system and good streets. The sewer system Bend is soon to have. And Bend can also have the streets. Not necessarily paved streets, for that, in the beginning, is considerable of a luxury, but at least graded and macadamized streets. The cost would be comparatively light, and the benefits great. And just like the sewer work, which is due to start shortly, such activity would accomplish wonders, not only in building up a substantial city, but also in keeping that city a profitable place in which to live and do business during the making.

Thanksgiving Day is here. Everyone has something for which to be thankful. Even the most pessimistic should own up to this, and act accordingly, at least once a year. Wilson, enjoying his last hours of peace in Bermuda, doubtless is thankful. Perhaps Taft is thankful because he doesn't have to go through it all again. No doubt Roosevelt is thankful because he progressed as far as he did. Here at home, the people of Bend have much for which to be thankful. Never before has the town passed through a year of more substantial development, and never before faced a year of greater promise.

With the election of Woodrow Wilson, Virginia has another honor thrust upon her. This is the distinction of having furnished to the United States eight Presidents, a record that no other state can approach. The other seven honor sons of the Old Dominion were Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, William H. Harrison, Tyler and Taylor.

Crook county won honors at the Minneapolis Land Show, taking the Northern Pacific cup for the best display of forage plants. As this was in direct competition with the displays of seven Northwestern states, it is something to crow over. Oregon farmers give a good account of themselves at any show where they enter exhibits.

Thirty-four states have now ratified the amendment to the Federal constitution providing for an income tax. With the endorsement of two more states, which seems likely, the amendment will be adopted and Congress will have the authority to tax incomes.

It is interesting to note in the "New York Times" an advertisement of the sale of the furniture of the Democratic National Committee. Hereafter, for at least four years, Uncle Sam supplies the furniture necessary for Democratic use.

NON-PRODUCTIVE CONSUMERS. (Springfield Republican). George K. Holmes of the agricultural department reports that the increased cost of living is partly due to social aspirations on the part of the women of the farmer's family which are incompatible with household labor. Farm wages in 44 years have risen 79 per cent, and the real remuneration of the laborer has increased even more because of his increased value represented by his board. But in the meantime multitudes of housewives have ceased to cure fruits, vegetables and meat, and depend upon the local store for the product of the cannery. The household arts have declined while at the same time country girls have become increasingly unwilling to do household work for hire. In short, the burden of Mr. Holmes' indictment is that non-productive consumers are increasing.

TAFT SERENE. (New York Times.)

Mr. Taft is unconquerable in his philosophy and his good humor. Victory and defeat alike are great tests of a man, but possibly defeat is the greater. He who triumphs and comes into power must rule his own spirit, but to the loser falls the heavier lot of having to bear disappointment and give no sign. In his Lotus Club talk Mr. Taft spoke with no trace of resentment, least of all with any bitterness, but with a serene mind and with his accustomed pleasantries, of the disastrous ending of his candidacy. It was, as he said, "a very emphatic verdict." Doubtless the very emphasis of it made some appeal to his sense of humor. Who could be vexed with forty-six sovereign states, or rage against 12,000,000 voters? Far from showing that futile temper, the President said that he "cherished only the deepest gratitude to the American people for having given me the honor of holding this office." That is the spirit that robs defeat of its sting, that is the nobility of soul that lifts and sustains and deprives this emphatic verdict of all power to embitter or humiliate.

It was with sober dignity, in few words but unmistakably, that Mr. Taft alluded to the harsh injustice with which he has been treated by too many of his own party, by too many of the people. He is too well aware of his own desert, of the worth of his service, and of the place he holds in the esteem of this community to make such a reference at all out of place. He knows, all candid men know, that time will right this wrong, as it did in the ultimate tribute of respect and affection paid to Grover Cleveland, who in his second term was much railed at by the groundlings and by factious foes. There is good ground for the President's belief that the period of muck-raking is drawing to a close. Of that conscienceless, slandering breed many have sunk out of sight and hearing, some of their publications have gone with them, and public disgust has warned the rest to mend their ways.

There is soundness and wisdom in Mr. Taft's suggestion of a single term of six years for our Presidents. The gain to the people would be obvious and very great. In many ways a presidential campaign is a public nuisance. The minds of the people are distracted, business, whether foolishly or not, has acquired the habit of coming to a halt, as though some great calamity impended—probably Mr. Taft will recall, not without a reminiscent smile, that during the late campaign something was said about the closing of factory doors in case the voting went wrong—and men, and women, too, are drenched with a flood of utterance and wearied with passionate mouthings. It is unnecessary, it is stupid, if we should reduce the frequency of the national upheaval from three times in twelve years to twice in twelve years the gain would be immense. There would be the added and important advantage of shielding the incumbent of the office from the temptation to use power and patronage in the effort to secure a second term.
