

WHAT'S IN A FARM NAME?

Every Comfortable Homestead is Worth its Own Distinctive Title. Every good man and woman has a cherished memory of the old home where childhood's days were spent, and if that old home was on a farm that farm should have a name that will distinguish it from all other farms of the county.

Nearly every other business house, factory or firm has adopted a name and a credit is established. Every farm is worthy of a name, and every farmer can make a reputation and establish a credit for his farm and its products through intelligent, careful study and the adoption of approved modern methods of procedure.

A well chosen name lends dignity to a place and is a sort of trademark which distinguishes it and its products; it characterizes its owner as a man of pride and stimulates all who are interested in it or its products to do and to be the best.

We believe that a well selected name will furnish an incentive for better farming; that all implements, tools, vehicles, crates and products whenever possible should have the name of the farm indelibly stamped upon them; that it should adorn every entrance to the farm and be printed upon all stationery used on the farm. We believe that the name should relate to some distinct feature of the farm, its location, topography or products.—Illinois Farmers' Institute.

Feeding Value of Pumpkins.

Pumpkins are about 90 per cent water. It has been estimated that two and one-half tons of pumpkins equal in feeding value about one ton of silage and that twenty pounds of pumpkins contain as much digestible protein as a pound of corn. The principal value of pumpkins lies in their succulence and as a part of the ration are valuable for all kinds of live stock.—Kansas Farmer.

Labor Saving Log Roller.

On every farm where there is timber of large size there ought to be a cant-hook, an implement shown in the picture, for the purpose of moving heavy logs, says Home and Farm, from which picture and description are taken. It will save a tremendous amount of heavy lifting, and one man with a cant-hook can do as much, or even more, than two without it. The handle should be about five feet long and the iron hook about twelve inches, or if very large logs are to be used fifteen inches. The hook should work loosely on a bolt through the handle and the "business end" be slightly curved inward and always kept sharp.

Farmers in the future will not be so anxious to manage large farms, but will be more concerned in securing large yields per acre. Science is teaching what can be accomplished by the intelligent use of manure and fertilizers so that the yield of our farms may be increased.—Farm and Ranch.
