WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1913.

The owners of property along the sewer ought immediately to avail themselves of the opportunity to have connection with it made as provided by the resolution adopted by the council last week. The trench is open, the city has the necessary tools and equipment and the organization to do the work. It can be done most cheaply now.

In the more cosmopolitan sections of our country such things are done about as follows: A street is laid out and a contract let for expensive paving which is laid. When the pavement has been down about long enough to begin to feel at home someone recalls that no water mains were put in, and three feet of pavement is torn up and the water mains put down. Then the pavement is replaced. After a while someone thinks that a sewer ought to be run along that street. Up comes three more feet of pavement, in goes the sewer and the pavement is put back. Next the process is repeated with gas mains and they are followed by conduits to contain the unsightly wires that had been carried on poles. Each time the pavement is replaced, to the great delight of contractors and at the equally great expense of the taxpayers. Finally it is decided to run a subway under the street and everything is ripped out and done over.

That is the sort of thing that the resolution of the council is calculated to avoid. Every owner will ultimately have to make the connection. Why not do it now?

Often one hears it said that "there are very few birds in Bend." The people who say that usually are the ones who don't know the difference between a bluejay and a skylark, and who never notice the birds. At all events it is quite untrue, for not only are there birds hereabout, but a surprisingly large variety. Even during the winter many birds have lingered along the Deschutes, and thousands have passed through Bend on their migrations. Robins, for instance, have been here all winter. A bird lover, who is simply an amateur and is no close student of birdlore, has supplied the following catalogue of birds seen here during the last thirty days; examination of the list shows an interesting assortment: English sparrow, song sparrow, ground sparrow, junco or snowbird, chickadee, white-breasted nuthatch, juniper jay, American robin, American bluebird, red-winged blackbird, flicker or heigho, meadow lark, downy woodpecker, rose-breasted grosbeak, sandpiper, chicken hawk and hoot owl. That includes 17 birds—not a bad record for a chance observer during a single month in a place "where there are very few birds," is it?

The attractive results that can be secured with a modest expenditure are well illustrated along St. Helens drive in Park Addition—and for that matter in many other sections of the residential districts. There are clever utilizations of rocks, pleasant lawns and tasteful houses. It is a satisfaction to see a new residence being erected so planned and placed that all the surrounding trees are preserved, a few years hence, when this little place retains the beauties of its trees, other landholders who row rash in and cut off every tree will cast envious eyes upon it. One of the greatest assets of Bend's residential lots is their trees; it is a remarkable pity if any of them which possibly can be retained are destroyed.

GIVE UP WHAT?

In the Portland Oregonian last Wednesday we read of a young man of Chicago who, having set his clothes afire while smoking a cigarette in bed jumped into a tub of water to extinguish the flames and was drowned. In his rush to the tub he hit against a gas cock, turned on the gas which lighted, flared up and set the house on fire.

After reading this we began to wonder, and are still wondering, whether we ought (1) to give up smoking, (2) to give up smoking in bed, (3) to keep away from the bath tub, (4) to light the house with electricity or (5) to stop reading dispatches from Chicago.

The service at the federal pie counter seems to be slower than ever before. Unless the Democratic leaders hurry to ladle out the goodies to the patient customers, some of them may get disgusted and abandon waiting.

P. S. to get good soap and a good washboard and a good clothesline that won't break I go to

RIVERSIDE and LYTTLE

---These are the two additions which comprise the northern end of the town. Look at the map and you will see some of the advantages of these two pieces of property. The railroad cuts them directly in two, running for three quarters of a mile through the center of the plat, making a full mile and a half of property bounding the right of way. Every foot of this is bound to become very valuable for warehouse and factory sites or for any other business that requires proximity to a railroad for easily and cheaply receiving or shipping goods.

---These lots are GOING FAST, so don't hesitate another day. Call or write for further particulars.
