

FROM THE DICKEYVILLE CLARION

Through the courtesy of Col. J. Willoughby Guff of Dickeyville, The Bulletin is able to give its readers the privilege of perusing the following choice extracts from that sterling organ of progress, the Dickeyville Clarion. These paragraphs will be continued so long as the Colonel sends the clippings—or until some subscriber beats up the editor.

Since one of our leading citizens has taken up practicing on a French horn, property in his vicinity has depreciated nearly fifty per cent.

By gravity, you can't believe all you see in the papers. Hi Purdy saw an ad which said a company down to the city had nickel alarm clocks for sale and he went down there, but couldn't get one for a nickel anywhere.

Miss Euphemia Perkins, our poetess of passion, is talkin' 'n' startin' suit agin' the heirs and assigns of late Pringle who passed away about twenty-seven years ago. About two months ago they decided to erect a monument for the late lamented and hired our poetess to write the epitaph. After it had carved on the tombstone so she couldn't take it back, they refused to pay, sayin' that the sentiment wasn't exactly what they wanted, as it seemed to have a little sarcasm into the tail end of it and there was too much free advertising for the author in it. This was the epitaph:

"I'm asked to write a little jingle, In memory of old man Pringle, In writin' epitaphs, you see, The graveyard's full of my best verse;

You might go further and do worse, A person's virtues I'll rehash And only ask half down in cash. Old man Pringle lies beneath this stone,

For many years he lived alone, But when they knew that he would die,

The relatives of all rallied nigh, For he had quite a lot of dough, And this the relatives did know, He was the queerest of old chaps, He's gone to his reward—perhaps.

The lawyer says that Euphemia might have said a little more about Pringle and a little less about herself on the tombstone, but he will try and win the case for her nevertheless.

One idea of prosperity is to have a wife who collects alimony from three former husbands.

We don't know who the meanest man on earth is, but Hank Tumms has stole a footstone out'n the graveyard to use as a pancake griddle.

Speaking of color schemes, many a girl may resemble an angel in Alice blue, but still look like Helen pink.

Hank Tumms says the hardest feller he knows of to entertain is the one that is on the water wagon and doesn't smoke or chew, play cards or talk about his neighbors.

Has Made Its Way By the Way It's Made

WHEN we began marketing the International Commercial Car six years ago the one idea uppermost was to sell a useful car. That meant—a car for country roads, that would safely carry a reasonable load, always get there and back, and last long enough to be very profitable.

Some of those first cars are still doing an honest day's work every day. All of them paid for themselves. None of them was so efficient as the car we sell today. Now is the time to buy an

International Commercial Car

For the merchant engaged in any business requiring much light hauling, or prompt deliveries; for the business man who wishes to extend his territory; for the man who wants to cut down delivery expenses and at the same time be progressive and up-to-date, an International Commercial car is a good investment.

Simple, sure, powerful, it climbs hills, goes through mud-holes and sandy stretches, anywhere a team can travel at any speed from 3 to 18 miles an hour. Transmission is simple and direct. Brakes are powerful. Bearings are strong. A single lever controls the car. Write for catalogues and any information desired.

"Yes Sir! Studebaker wagons are made to back up a reputation."

"I know, because wagons of every make come into my shop for repairs, and I have a chance to see how few are Studebakers."

That's the opinion of thousands of blacksmiths who know the quality of Studebaker wagons.

The owners never regretted that they bought Studebakers.

Tested materials, accurate workmanship insure a wagon unequaled for durability, and this careful selection of wood, iron, steel, paint and varnish has been a fixed rule with the Studebaker Company for sixty years. That is why a Studebaker wagon runs easiest and lasts longest. It is built on honor.

Whether you live in town or country, there is a Studebaker vehicle to fill your requirements for business or pleasure — and harness of every description made as carefully as are Studebaker vehicles.
