

WOMEN IN "CAGES."

A Reminder of the Days When Crinolines Were the Vogue.

Fifty-one private letters of Dr. E. Barthez, physician to the prince imperial, have been translated by Bernard Miall to form "The Empress Eugenie and Her Circle." A letter from Biarritz (1856) describes the empress personally and discusses the fabulous amplitude of the dresses she wore:

"All this stuff is supported by a sort of skeleton of flexible iron. The empress is greatly attached to this cage, which to us seems very ungraceful and inconvenient. She sticks to it in spite of the quips of the emperor, to whom she simply replies that she does not know how she lived so many years without a cage.

"I can only find two excuses for this fashion. One is that women who wear it have their legs free in walking and are not hampered by skirts and petticoats hanging on their calves and thighs and impeding their movements; the other, in her case, is that there is a sort of harmony between the amplitude of the woman and the size of the apartments in which she lives. * * * Here a dozen women adorn the salon adorably and are in harmony with the wide spaces, the ample seats, the width and height of the doors. I knew nothing of this effect, which I now understand, and I now see why this taste—false in itself—has nevertheless a certain justness in its application."

STAGE HANDS.

From the Important Carpenter Down to the Lowly "Grip."

To the outsider the term stage hand is applied to every one that works behind the footlights except the players, but there is quite an aristocratic line of demarcation.

There are the stage carpenter and the assistant stage carpenter, who build scenery; there are the property man and the assistant property man, who make and shape all kinds of things out of paper mache for properties and look after the furniture and decorations of the stage; there are the fly men, who manipulate the ropes at the top of the theater, hoisting and lowering scenery and also raising and dropping the curtain. The natural habitat of these fly men is on platforms up in the flies, many feet above the stage, and when not otherwise employed they have the disconcerting habit of audibly gossiping and playing cards. Then there are the electrician and his assistants, whose business it is to operate the lights.

The humblest of the regular staff is the "grip." This man handles scenery and does general utility work about the stage. When exigency demands the force is added to from the roustabouts who usually infest the stage entrance, eking out a miserable existence through casual jobs and "sponging" upon the members of the regular staff.—Mary Shaw in London Strand Magazine.

The Inevitable Comment.

A committee of investigating scientists approached a lady.

"Madam," said Professor Prewins, the spokesman, offering her a magnificent chrysanthemum of rare and lovely hue—"madam, permit us to present this flower to you as a token of our high regard."

She clasped the splendid blossom in her lily hand.

Breathlessly the committee awaited her response.

"How beautiful it is!" she answered. "What an exquisite shade of purple! I should love to have a dress of that color."

Dr. Prewins nodded knowingly to the committee, as if to say, "I told you so." The committee winked at the professor and whispered, "You win."—Newark News.

The Pecan.

It is interesting to record that the first grafting of a pecan tree was accomplished by a negro slave, and it is doubtful whether any other member of the black race has ever performed an economic service to this country that is so signal in its importance. In 1847 Antoine, the slave gardener of Telesphore J. Homan of Louisiana, grafted sixteen trees of the variety that is now known as the Centennial. He later succeeded in grafting 110 other pecans, and these were the only grafted nut trees in America before 1855.—Archibald Rutledge in Outing.

The Proper Way.

"I wish you wouldn't growl so much," declared the wife, an ex-actress.

"Why shouldn't I growl when the meals are cold?" retorted the husband.

"You took me from the stage to be your wife."

"I did."

"Then if you disapprove of the way I play the part kindly express your disapproval by means of kisses."—Kansas City Journal.

Trials of Wealth.

"Wealth doesn't always bring happiness," remarked the youngster with the large spectacles.

"Now," asserted the other kid.

"Look at me cousin yonder. He's got 2 cents, and he can't decide between lollipops and ice cream."—Pittsburgh Post.

Proof.

"Women are born gamblers."

"That is rather a violent statement."

"It is true. Mighty few of them but are willing to marry."—Houston Post.

Stop the Loss—Fires are Unnecessary

Brick is absolutely fire proof in any ordinary conflagration. Brick Buildings never burn, although they are sometimes injured by falling timbers or combustible interior woodwork. A brick building is absolutely fire proof if wire glass is used in the windows and if burned clay floors are used. An interior fire in such a building is confined to the room in which it originates; no outside fire can attack it. The proportion of burned clay in a building construction measures its fire proof qualities. Burned clay is the only building material that has been through the fire before you get it, in such a manner that it will resist fire. All combustible material is burned out or the brick before you get it.
