TUMALO PROJECT

into the new feed canal.
Reservoir Cost Below Estimate.
The work in connection with storage works for this season, will consist of securing the necessary lands that will be flooded, testing the foundation of the dams, and securing reliable estimates and plans for construction next season. The lands necessary for the reservoir have already been secured for approximately $60,000, of which about 250 acres will be resold for about $18,500, making the net cost of the reservoir about $5000 less than previously estimated. A camp at the dam site has already been established and a Davis calyx drill outfit has been ordered, which will be put in operation as soon as possible. From facts and conditions as determined to date, the reservoir will cover approximately 1000 acres, which will necessitate the construction of two dams, one about 70 feet high and the other 25 feet.
The work on the distribution system this season will consist of complete topographic surveys, surveys determining the areas actually irrigated previous to this date, and complete land classification surveys. This will enable the men on the ground to make comprehensive studies of the lateral system which will be built next season.
The work on the project is divided into three distinct departments,—the accounting and clerical, engineering and construction. Those in charge of the various departments are men of large experience in their particular lines and have taken hold of the work with a great deal of interest to make a good showing for state work.

All purchases of camp equipment, material and supplies are made by the competitive bid system from the wholesale houses in Portland, from whom the very best prices have been received. In a few instances the local people have been able to give us the lowest prices on various articles, whom we are always glad to favor with our business, providing it is not at a financial loss. This will mean an expenditure of many thousands of dollars of the appropriation with the Portland merchants and manufacturers. The Portland people are beginning to realize that the development of this particular section means a great deal toward the development of Portland.
Portland's Benefits Cited.
Not only during the period of construction will Portland be benefitted, but it is the natural market for practically all produce which will be raised in this community after the project is completed. Portland business men and commercial bodies should bear this in mind and give this state project hearty support and co-operation, so that when completed it will be a matter of pride to the people living on the project and a credit to the state of Oregon and to all who had something to do with its construction. If brought to a successful conclusion, there is no doubt but that the state may continue in the reclamation business, which would mean the development of large areas in this interior which is dependent to a great extent upon water to grow satisfactory crops.
The Desert Land Board, in undertaking the work on this project, has to a great extent, brushed aside red tape and old established rules and regulations and gone forward on a business basis, so there are no reasons why the work should not be done at least as satisfactorily and economically as any previously undertaken by private or federal control. In order to facilitate the active operations on the project, all matters are left in the hands of the project engineer, with the exception of matters of policy, which are adopted by the board.
Banks at Bend.
To facilitate the payment of claims for labor on the ground, arrangements have been made with the First National Bank of Bend to make direct and prompt payments at Bend, so that no long delays will be experienced by the men who quit or who are discharged from the works.
A brief outline of the organization on the project is as follows, all of whom report to the project engineer:
G. Ed Ross, chief clerk, in charge of clerical, bookkeeping and accounting department.
H. C. Ruppel, engineer in charge of feed canal.
C. E. Hewitt, engineer in charge of topographic and classification surveys.
P. W. Beasley, office engineer, in charge of drafting and design surveys.
Axel Hye, superintendent of construction.
Alfred Hanson, superintendent of construction.
