GET THREE SPECIMENS

Naturalists Secure Three White-Tailed Deer—Other Museum Additions.

The representatives of the state game department who left here on January 21 to seek specimens of the white-tailed deer for the state game museum returned Monday after a successful trip, three specimens of the desired variety being secured. According to C. M. McKay, who accompanied the naturalists to give them the benefit of his knowledge of the country and of general woodcraft, the trip was a rather hard one because of the stormy weather encountered.

The three deer—a buck and two does—were in good condition. They were about three years old. In addition the naturalists spent considerable time in procuring other faunal specimens, including snowshoe rabbits, ground squirrels and woodrats mice. Thirty varieties of birds were obtained. All specimens were prepared for stuffing on the ground.

Stanley G. Jewett and O. J. Murie, naturalist and field assistant, left on the night train Monday.

FRUIT FED RATS OF UGANDA.

By the Natives They Are Regarded as a Dainty Dish.

The idea of eating rats is so repulsive to us that we cannot imagine such a thing unless one were driven to it by starvation. The people of Uganda, however, eat rats not from necessity, but because they like them. The rat of Uganda, however, is very different from the little creature that gnaws holes in our cupboards. This rat is much larger. It is more than a foot long and is therefore quite a substantial animal and as well worth cooking as a rabbit.

The wonderful thing about this rat is that it has two mouths, one behind the other. The first mouth has a pointed ratlike nose and is furnished with two rows of sharp white teeth, with which it bites off its food and passes it on to the second mouth, which is placed just above the throat. This mouth also has two rows of teeth, but one long slender tongue serves for both sets of grinders.

Rats are not only eaten in Uganda, but they are regarded as a delicacy. The king among his many retainers has one whose duty it is to furnish the royal table with rats. A rat catcher is not an excited person usually, but in Uganda he is looked upon with respect and walks with an air of dignity. He goes out rat hunting daily and generally finds his game among the young banana trees or in any place where fallen fruit or berries may be found, for this is what the rat lives on. Slender shoots of bamboo or banana or fruit and leaves are his food, and this diet makes his flesh tender and wholesome.

A CRESCENT OF RUINS.

The Curious Old Cliff Dwellings of the National Mesa Verde.

In the Mesa Verde National park, in southwestern Colorado, are 300 cliff dwellings, of which only the three largest have been repaired. The largest ruin, called Cliff palace, stands about a thousand feet above the bottom of the canyon and 300 feet below the top of the ledge. All the houses connect and open into one another, the entire settlement forming a crescent about 300 feet in length from end to end.

As we contemplate these silent ruins it is hard to believe that at one time they resounded with the hum of industry, the laughter of children, the droning of priests, and the strident cry of the sentinels calling the warriors to battle. The dwellers of these abandoned communities have left no written record, but the shape of the structures and the relics that have been dug from the debris of centuries give some idea of how these people lived and moved and had their being.

The main houses were built on a ledge close to its front, and back of this was an open space that answered the purpose of a court, a street, a playground or a place for industrial pursuits, such as weaving and pottery making. At intervals along the front were towers and bastions, and in the interior were kivas or secret chambers used for religious ceremonies. In every village were storehouses to provide a supply of provisions in times of war or failure of crops.

Leigh Hunt's Chaotic Home.

A curious description of Leigh Hunt's house, where the poet lived with his wife and six children, is that given by Carlyle, as recorded in "Bulletin and Review of the Keats-Shelley Memorial Home."

"Hunt's house excels all you have ever read of—a poetical tinkerdom without parallel even in literature. In his family room, where are a sickly large wife and a whole shoal of well conditioned, wild children, you will find half a dozen rickety chairs gathered from half a dozen different bucksters. On these and around them and over the dusty table and ragged carpet lie all kinds of litter—books, papers, eggshells, scissors and, last night when I was there, the torn heart of a half quartered loaf. His own room he keeps cleaner."

A Real Born Lady.

The word "lady" has been variously defined. Perhaps the best test, however, of "ladylikeness" is that cited by G. W. E. Russell in one of his books. "A good woman who let furnished apartments in a country town describing a lodger who had apparently 'known better days' said: 'I am positive she was a real born lady, for she hadn't the least idea of how to do anything for herself. It took her hours to peel her potatoes.'" The admiration of the worker for the "out of work" is one of the strangest phenomena of our modern civilization.—London Graphic.

Elegant Discourse.

"I want to be proserminated at the next corner," said Mr. Erastus Pinky. "You want to be what?" demanded the conductor. "Don't lose your temper. I had to look in the dictionary 'nays' before I found out that 'proserminate' means 'put off.'"—Washington Star.

RESOLUTIONS.

Bend Lodge No. 897, The Fraternal Brotherhood, Bend, Oregon, Jan. 22, 1914, adopt the following resolutions:

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst our brother and Supreme President,

James A. Foshay,

And whereas it is fitted that we should give our expressions to the esteem in which we are held, be it

Resolved, that in his death we have lost a sincere friend, and a ruler whose counsel we shall greatly miss; the society has lost one of its wisest, most forceful and patriotic officers, and the society at large an enterprising and conservative business man. Resolved, that we tender our heartfelt sympathy to his family in this their bereavement and commend them to "Him" who alone can help them to bear up under such a burden. It is ordered that these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the lodge, a copy sent to the Supreme Lodge and another to our local paper.

CROPS LOOK GOOD.

Ending a three weeks' trip, Tom A. Vedder of Lower Bridge, representative of the Lafollette Nursery Co., who was in Bend last week, reported that all over the interior country ranchers are more cheerful over the outlook for crops the coming season than ever before. All the moisture that has fallen this winter has gone into the ground, he said, and the winter grain looks good everywhere. This is especially true in the grain country in the northern part of the county. Out in the Millican valley the settlers are agitating for a community well and hope to obtain one. Preparation is being made to set out fruit trees everywhere. "On the whole," said Mr. Vedder, "I never saw people so cheerful and satisfied over the crop prospect."

DEATH OF BLANCHE A. BROWN.

Blanche A. Brown, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Brown of Goshen, Ore., died Friday of a complication of diseases. She was in her 23rd year, having been born October 21, 1891, in Burlington, Kansas. She came with her parents to Oregon in January, 1910, and came to Bend last summer in search of health. The funeral was held from the Baptist church yesterday afternoon, Rev. E. G. Judd officiating. Interment was made in Pilot Butte Cemetery.
