CANALS BEING REPAIRED

C. O. I. Co. Has Many Men At Work, Water on Next Week.

Preparing for the opening of the irrigation season the Central Oregon Irrigation Company is now employ-ing about 100 men and 50 teams on the Central Oregon and Pilot Butte canals doing more repair work than in any previous year. About two weeks more are needed to finish the enlargement of the Central Oregon canal which was begun last fall. When this is finished there will be enlargement work of a minor nature carried on along this canal all summer. Water will be turned in about

As yet little has been done by the Reclamation Service in the investi-gation of the North Canal unit. An engineer of the service was in a short time ago and spent a few days in going over the ground, but since then nothing has been done. It is ex-pected that when the service begins who will spend a season in investiga-
